120 Lives Lost In Fierce Battle As Students Riot

Leaders Are Put to Death When Coup Attempt Is Frustrated.

Failure in Chaco Campaign Blamed

Army Members Assist in Uprising and Pay With Lives.

Lima, Peru, April 8 (AP).—A dispatch today to the newspaper El Comercio from Puno, Peruvian port on Lake Titiacaca, near the Bolivian boundary, said 120 persons were killed and several wounded in a revolt of military cadets at La Paz, capital of Bolivia, last Thursday.

Dispatches from La Paz last week said two women, caught in crossfire on a street, were the only victims of the disorder.

The revolt was suppressed. El Comercio's article said court-martials speedily condemned several leaders of the rebellion and they were executed a few hours later.

"Confirming the Bolivian revolt," the Puno correspondent said, "it was learend here, despite strict censorship that at dawn Thursday military school cadets attacked and seized police barracks, also the army's headquarters, helped by recruits.

"The actual fight started at 11 a. m. Thursday when carabineers attacked the rebels, resulting in 120 killed and several hundred wounded. Gen. Lanza intervened and the rebels surrendered at noon.

"Revolt leaders were court-martialed immediately, were sentenced to capital punishment and were executed by firing squads at 3 p. m.

"It was learned that popular discontent on account of the failure of the Chaco campaign (war with Paraguay), quarrels among political parties and deportations, as well as commercial and economic pauperism, originated the revolt.

"It was also reported that the government ordered several revolutionaries into exile and the death penalty for others, especially members of the army."

The dispatch said quiet prevailed now with the government in control.

$550,000,000 U.S. Bonds Sold

Morgenthau Gratified at Great Demand for New Issue.

(Associated Press.)

A $550,000,000 response in four days to the Government's new $1,250,000,000 bond issue was announced yesterday by the Treasury.

Secretary Morgenthau gave notice to holders of maturing securities that their opportunity to make an exchange with the Government would terminate "within the next few days."

Cash offers are not being received. Only holders of $1,000,000,000 in fourth Liberty bonds, called for April 15, and $244,234,600 in certificates due May 2, may exchange them for the new 10-12 year issue of 3¼ per cent bonds.

"While applications for exchange have been coming in with gratifying promptness," Morgenthau said, "it is possible that some holders of the securities eligible for exchange, particularly holders of the called fourth Liberties, may not realize fully the advantages of making the exchange.

"It is probable also that some holders of the fourth Liberties have not noticed that their bonds have been called for redemption on April 15 and that payment of interest on them will cease on that date. It is important to them that they should not overlook the advantages of conversion.

"The Treasury is concerned that none of the holders of these securities shall suffer a loss because of lack of information."

Relief Ships Sent After 50 Drowned

Survivors Expected to Flee Norwegian Town.

Oslo, Norway, April 8 (AP).—Relief ships were sent today from Aalesund to the little town of Tafjord, where at least 50 persons were killed and a number of others still are missing after yesterday's great fall of rock, which caused waves from the sea to engulf the town. A ship is the only kind of conveyance able to reach Tafjord.

No further falls of rock were expected, but it was believed that most of the terror-stricken survivors will desert the locality, which was turned into a death trap by rushing waters.

It was learned today that old inhabitants had predicted years ago the cliff would some day fall into the sea, bringing disaster.

Police Swamp Traffic Judge After Scolding

Sh-h-h-h, don't say a word—but the Police Traffic Bureau is planning a "surprise party" for Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court this morning.

For the second time in less than a month, bureau officials yesterday announced a new all-time record for one-day arrests. And the majority of those arrested will face Judge McMahon in court today. (That's the surprise.)

The judge, in a recent statement from the benth, scored traffic policemen for "coasting" on the job. He said they lacked supervision and were allowed to do pretty much as they pleased. So, the policemen took it as a "bawling out" and set to work smashing records.

In an 8-hour period, ending at 8 a. m. yesterday, 327 motorists were booked for traffic violations. Another half-a-hundred were sum-

Wirt Probers Spike Charge Of "Shielding"

'Red Revolt' Informant, If Named, Will Face Punishment.

Dr. William A. Wirt, Indiana educator, whose "brain trust revolution" charges stirred up a Congressional storm, will be called upon tomorrow by a special House investigating committee to name his informant.

Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the committee, said Dr. Wirt will be asked at once the name of the Administration adviser who told him "President Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution."

Answering Republican charges that the committee planned to shield the "brain trust" from a real investigation, O'Connor said:

"We will ask Dr. Wirt who told him that about the President, and the man he names will wish he'd never said it."

Wirt Expected Tonight.

Dr. Wirt is expected here tonight, to put the finishing touches on a statement regarding the Government's economic policies, which he hopes to make to the committee. It was indicated, however, that the head of the Gary school system may be disappointed. He had asked for 10 days' delay to prepare his statement.

A majority of the investigating committee has decided that Dr. Wirt must be asked pjoint blank for the name of his informant, before he is permitted to read any statement. And if he refuses, the

Wreckage Hints Death Of Aviator in Crash

Pontiac, Mich., April 8 (AP).—Mystery surrounding the fate of Alonzo Layman, 27-year-old aviator who disappeared on December 19 while flying from Pontiac to Detroit was solved today with the finding of fragments of the plane on the Lake Erie beach, 10 miles north of Monroe, Mich.

Kenneth Barber, of Williams Lake, owner of the plane, identified bits of linen and the left aileron as coming from the plane, which he helped to build, and said that Layman apparently lost his way in a fog and crashed into the lake.

Cannon Faces Election Act Trial Today

Militant Bishop's Four Year Fight Against Hearing, Ends.

Divine Urges Speedy Action as He Makes 'Politics' Charge.

Climaxing four years of bitter controversy and litigation in Congress and the District courts, the trial of Bishop James Cannon, jr., and his former secretary, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, on an election law charge is due to start today in District Supreme Court.

Only the granting of a defense motion to require the Government to file a bill of particulars can postpone further the trial against which the silver-haired Southern Methodist churchman waged such a vigorous, if losing battle.

Bishop Cannon and his former secretary must stand trial on two counts of an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act in their conduct of the campaign against Alfred E. Smith, Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928.

If their motion requiring a bill of particulars is overruled this morning by Justice Peyton Gordon, before whom the case is to be tried, a jury will be selected and the Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Barton, Baptist minister of Wilmington, N. C., who helped organize the anti-Smith campaign, will be called as the first witness.

May Not Press Request.

The United States District attorney's office has announced a week or more will be required to draft the bill of particulars if the defense request is granted. Since Bishop Cannon has expressed anxiety to have the trial over before the Southern Methodist General Conference at Jackson, Miss., April 22, it is believed he will not press his request.

The bishop and Miss Burroughs indicated their desire for a comparatively speedy trial Saturday by appearing before Assistant District Attorney John J. Wilson and signing admissions of Government evidence whereby the trial will be shortened by at least one week. It still is expected to occupy a full fortnight, the Government having subpenaed 30 witnesses.

Chief among these Government witnesses will be Edwin C. Jameson, president of the Globe and Rutgers Insurance Co. of New York, who contributed more than $60,000 to the "Headquarters Committee, Anti-Smith Democrats," directed by Bishop Cannon. Miss Burroughs was treasurer of the committee.

It is the alleged failure, "wilfully" and "unlawfully," of the bishop and Miss Burroughs to report in full the disposition of this sum to South Trimble, clerk of the House of Representatives, which brought about the present trial. Trimble will be another Government witness, and will present the reports actually turned in by the anti-Smith committee.

Another of the Government's principal witnesses will be E. J.

Devout Russians Observe Easter

Moscow, April 7 (U.P.).—Despite 17 years of antireligious propaganda conducted by the Soviet government, the devout Christians of Moscow gathered last night to celebrate Easter.

There were no ceremonial parades as of old, but places of worship were crowded. Hundreds, unabled to enter the packed churches, stood in the streets reverently listening, through open doors, to the services.

Today is Easter Sunday, according to the Greek Orthodox Church, but following a tradition born hundreds of years ago, modern Russians started their celebration of Christ's resurrection from the tomb at midnight last night.

Ingrid and Danish Prince to Be Wed

CROWN PRINCE FREDERICK.

PRINCESS INGRID.

London, April 8 (AP).—Despite official denials, it was learned today from persons closely associated with Scandinavian royalty that the announcement of the engagement of the Danish Crown Prince Frederick to the beautiful Swedish Princess Ingrid is expected to follow upon the return of King Gustaf to Stockholm from the Riviera.

The fact was reported in well-informed quarters, both at Copenhagen and at Stockholm. It was said the royal couple already are engaged, but are pledged to delay official announcement until the king's return.

If there should be any slip before the end of this month, when the announcement is expected, it was understood that Crown Prince Frederick is determined to remain a bachelor, like the Prince of Wales.

Princess Ingrid's name was closely linked with that of Prince Edward a few years ago, but an engagement did not develop.

A recent meeting of Prince Frederick and Princess Ingrid at Cannes was said to have resulted from a romantic wish of the Danish prince to seal his troth privately with the future queen on the spot where his

3 Are Killed As Rock Slide Hits 3 Autos

3 Injured by Avalanche on New York Road Near West Point.

West Point, N. Y., April 8 (AP).—Roaring down the face of Storm King Mountain, an avalanche of suddenly loosed rocks smashed three automobiles today, killing three persons and injuring three others.

A huge boulder struck the car driven by Otto Seilheimer, of East Paterson, N. J., killing his wife and son, Otto, jr., 8.

Seilheimer and his daughter, Geraldine, 18 months, were taken to Cornwall Hospital suffering minor injuries.

From the wreckage of another car were dragged Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Shacknis, of Brooklyn. They were taken to the Cadet Hospital at West Point where Shacknis died of a fractured skull.

Another boulder crashed into the rear seat of a third car, narrowly missing Dr. F. E. Lehman and Miss Agnes Wolf, both of Long Island. A wrecking crew worked for hours to dislodge the 500-pound rock.

Fred W. Olthoff, of West New York, N. J., a passenger in the Shacknis car, escaped injury.

Traffic along the highway, which skirts a 400-foot cliff along the side of the mountain, was blocked nearly a half hour as State police and Army officers from the United States Military Academey here cleared away debris.

The cause of the slide, which originated several hundred feet above the crowded highway, was not immediately determined.

12 Racing Pigeons Stolen From Loft

Twelve racing pigeons, valued at $200, were stolen yesterday from the loft of William F. Dismer, Washington pigeon fancier, he reported to police.

The birds were taken from a loft in the 1300 block of Columbia road northwest, early yesterday, Dismer said. The missing pigeons are champion racers. A reward was offered for the thieves.

New York, April 8 (AP).Two dozen toy balloons exploded in an East Side crowd today, seriously burning their owner, Morris Berebaum, 53, a balloon vender, and injuring four other persons.

3 Found Dead of Gas At Home in Brooklyn

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 8 (AP).—Three persons were found dead of carbon monoxide poisoning in their apartment today. Police said a gas heater apparently had absorbed all the oxygen in the place.

The victims were Charles Reese, 30; Margaret Reese, 22, and William Reese, 10.

Driver Seized As Bullet Hits Women's Auto

Millersville, Md., Man Held at Hyattsville as Car Sniper.

Thomas W. Smith, of Millersville, Md., was arrested yesterday, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon on a warrant sworn by three young women, who declared he played hide-and-seek with them on the Crain highway and shot at their automobile. He was held at Hyattsville.

Mrs. Clara B. Cook, of Curtis Bay, Md., said she was driving before dawn with Miss Pearl Wallace and Miss Margaret Pfeffer, both of Baltimore, when another car sped up behind them. It remained behind them for some distance and then passed and turned into a side road.

The women said they drove on, but soon noticed the car trailing them again. Again the car passed and turned into a side road. They said this went on for several miles. They were unable to leave the car by driving faster.

After 15 miles, according to police, a bullet passed through the rear curtain of the women's car and shattered the windshield. Four more shots are said to have been fired.

The women stopped at a store on the Defense highway, near Glen Dale, and telephoned Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville.

Officer Claude Reese caught the pursuing car near Priest's Bridge. He said he took five empty shells and a .22 caliber rifle as evidence. Police said Smith told them that he knew the women and was trying to amuse them by firing. Police stated that Smith admitted he had been drinking.

Police Seek Youth For Striking Woman

Police are searching for a well-dressed young man, reported traveling in an automobile of an expensive make, who yesterday accosted Mrs. Mildred White, of Norfolk, Va., as she walked along upper Connecticut avenue northwest, struck her in the face and snatched her purse containing valuable papers.

Mrs. White said the man fled in a large sedan. Contents of the pocketbook are valueless to the stranger, she said.

St. Marys Hen Lays Egg With Map Outline

Leonardtown, Md., April 8 (Spl.). A resident of St. Marys County has on exhibition an egg with a perfect map of North America and Cuba, embossed on the shell.

The hen which laid it was isolated for a few days as it appeared to be sick. It laid the oddly marked egg and recovered, and is as well as ever. It is believed that part of the shell became joined to another egg to cause the odd formation.

Tax Increase Faces Snag In Roosevelt

President's Approval on 10 Per Cent Boost Is Doubted.

Sharp Lines Drawn for Battle Today; Defeat Seen in House.

(United Press.)

Doubt that President Roosevelt will approve the proposed 10 per cent increase in taxes on 1934 incomes was expressed in high official circles last night as Senate leaders prepared to expedite action today on the pending revenue bill.

Battle lines over the issue were closely drawn in both Houses of Congress. Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, mutilmillionaire leader of the "soak-the-rich" movement in the Senate, is expected to offer an amendment to the tax bill today calling for the flat 10 per cent increase in all income tax returns.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, which is in charge of the huge revenue bill, indicated no disposition over the week-end to change his original plans to accept the Couzens amendment. He has approved it as an emergency measure.

Under the Couzens proposal, a person subject to a normal tax of $100 on his 1934 income would pay instead $110.

House Leaders to Fight It.

House leaders remained firm in their avowed determination to oppose the increased levies unless they are demanded by President Roosevelt.

"Nothing has arisen since the President left the Capital, so far as I can see, to justify the imposition of these new and higher levies upon the American people," said Majority Leader Joseph W. Byrns (Democrat), of the House.

Similar expressions came form Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Ways and Means sub-com-

U. S. Prepares To Ship Insull

Fugitive's Lawyers Hint Trump Card Planned to Save Client.

Istanbul, April 8 (AP).—Robert P. Skinner, United States Ambassador to Turkey, definitely indicated today that Samuel Insull will be started back to the United States in a few days to face fraud charges in Chicago.

Arrangements have been made for Insull's delivery by Turkish authorities to the American Embassy, with Third Secretary Burton Y. Berry, who will accompany him home, in charge.

But Insull's lawyers, who yesterday presented to the criminal court an argument in favor of his right to appeal against detention, announced they had not yet played their last card.

What step they planned was not revealed. Attorney General Kenan Bey has ruled the former utilities magnate can not appeal from the detention order.

The lawyers said he had not yet paid them, but they expect to collect when Insull is allowed to receive funds, understood to have been wired from London.

Cubs Win, 5-2, Over Nats As Klein Is Star

(Sports Editor of The Post.

Wrigley Field, Chicago, Ill., April 8.—Mr. Chuck Klein, formerly a famous citizen of Philadelphia before he moved to Chicago during the winter, this afternoon moved into the hearts of Cub fans when his hit-laden bat moved three runs across the plate in the course of the Cubs' triumph over the Nats by a score of 5 to 2.

Altogether it was a swell job of moving by Mr. Klein, who nudged the ball for a single, a double and a home run during the afternoon and the two Chicago runs that he didn't drive in he scored himself, just to make it unanimous for Mr. Klein.

The piece de resistance of Mr. Klein's efforts occurred along about

Congress Waits Yacht Message Of Roosevelt

President Rests Before 'Fish Libel' Quiz Slated Today.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Coral Gables, Fla., April 8 (Spl.). Close behind his action yesterday in signing two important bills passed in his absence, President Roosevelt tomorrow will exercise another Executive prerogative while vacationing aboard the yacht Nourmahal by transmitting a brief special message to Congress.

The message will be accompanied by an Executive order, signed Saturday at sea and made public by White House headquarters here today, transferring certain functions now vested in the Veterans' Administration to the United States Civil Service Commission. Under law, it will become effective in 60 days, unless adversely acted upon by Congress.

Meanwhile, with attention still divided between fishing and affairs of state, Mr. Roosevelt tonight was moving northward aboard the Astor yacht for tomorrow's rendezvous at sea with newspapermen, who will conduct a court of inquiry into the Presidential fishing.

In his message, Mr. Roosevelt informs Congress he is transferring to the Civil Service Commission those duties of Veterans' Administration pertaining to the administration of the Civil Service retirement act and the Canal Zone retirement act.

Saving of $45,000 Seen.

"The administration of laws governing the retirement of civil employes of the Government," the President says, "is logically and properly a function of the Civil Service Commission, and the transfer effected by this order will permit a more efficient administration of the activities involved. The director of the Bureau of the Budget has informed me that the transfer will result in an annual saving of approximately $45,000."

The order declares this change within the purposes of the act authorizing the President to make such reorganizations and, further, directs the transfer of "all personnel, records, files and property" used by the Veterans' Administration in

G. O. P. Senators Draft Substitute Plan to Return Awards.

Proof Demanded For Cancellations

Proposal Would Set Pay at 2 Cents a Plane Mile.

An amendment to the air-mail act, designed to replace the McKeller-Black bill and to compel the restoration of canceled contracts until fraud is proved, will be introduced today by three Republican Senators, Austin, Vermont; Davis, Pennsylvania, and Barbour, New Jersey.

With one of the country's major carriers — the United Aircraft Transport Corporation — arranging reorganization in order to bid on air-mail contracts, and other leading companies expected to follow suit, action by the Senate on permanent legislation has been anxiously awaited in aviation circles. Bitter debate and criticism of the Administration is anticipated.

The McKeller-Black bill is expected to be taken up Wednesday by the Senate, if the tax bill is out of the way. Its provisions would bar carrier companies whose contracts were canceled from further air-mail business until they reorganized.

Seek Immediate Action.

In a statement yesterday, however, the three Republican Senators, two of whom are members of the Postoffice Committee, and the third, Austin, of the Black air mail investigating committee, announced intention of seeking immediate restoration of the contracts pending settlement of Postmaster General Farley's charges of fraud and collusion.

Meanwhile, the Postoffice Department has advertised for bids on temporary contracts, open to companies which have reorganized. Farley has intimated he will scrap these temporary contract proposals if permanent legislation is passed before April 20, the date for opening the bids.

The Austin-Barbour-Davis amendment, which its authors hope to substitute for the McKeller-Black bill, would fix future compensation for carrying air mail at 2 mills per pound-mile, provide a Government subsidy to encourage development of commercial aviation and recognize that "competitive bidding is not adaptable to the situation."

The coauthors of the amendment issued a statement yesterday saying it was framed "for the objectives

Armenians Riot In Church Rift

10 Cut as Boston Factions Battle 250 Police in City Streets.

Boston, April 8 (AP).—Rival factions of the Armenian Church, each accusing the other of the murder in New York last December of Archbishop Leon Tourian, fought with knives, ice picks and other weapons on the streets of Boston today. Nine cut and badly bruised combatants were arrested, charged with "participating in an affray."

More than 250 police, armed with riot guns and gas bombs, attacked the rioters and thousands of spectators were attracted to the affray.

The Tachnigs, a secret Armenian society, engaged the Colonial Theater for their meeting. The Armenian Democratic Society and the Armenian Protestants and Catholics engaged another auditorium nearby.

Just before the time set for the meetings, parades of the factions met on Boylston street.

"Down with the Tashnigs, murderers of our bishop," was the shout. The affray began immediately.

Only seven policemen were near the scene, but as the trouble grew a riot call brought wagonloads of officers.

Injured Policeman Dies at Salisbury

Salisbury, Md., April 8 (Spl.), Motorcycle Policeman Joseph Kuhn, of Woodbine, attached to a substation at Salisbury, died today at the Peninsular General Hospital here from injuries received when he collided with a horse cart near Mardela Springs Saturday night.

Sam Dashiell, Negro, reported to be the driver of the cart, was being held here pending an inquest. Police were investigating reports that the cart had no lights.

Kuhn was driving in the same direction as the cart at the time of the crash, police said. He was hurled from his machine, his head striking the pavement.

Stenog and Deb Tilt a Nose At Man Who'd Wed for Money

New York, April 8 (AP).—Two girls, stenographer and society debutante, regard it as a gesture both fine and discreet—this admission by Prof. Robert E. Rogers that his famous recipe for success wasn't so good.

In Rochester, N. Y., yesterday, Prof. Rogers said he was "all wrong" five years ago when he issued this bit of advice for up-and-coming young men:

"Marry the boss' daughter, and don't bother with the stenographer if you expect to succeed."

Today, Miss Mildred Reilly, New York stenographer, had this comment:

"It is pretty nice of the professor to back-track. It sounds like he is emancipating the working girl. The developments of the past few years have sort of played hob with his theory," she said.

She detected what she considered a slight fallacy in the professor's statement that the young man should have married the stenographer because "she has a job and the boss' daughter is broke."

"This is just a little hard on the stenographer," Miss Reilly asserted. "Why should the fellow who regards marriage as just a springboard to business success be wished on us? The society girls are welcome to men like that.

"Anyway, the boss' daughter isn't necessarily broke. She may be pecking the keys of the typewriter next to mine. So the fellow would have gotten a stenographer whether he intended to or not."

A society girl who showed patrician aversion to the use of her name was pleased about Prof. Rogers' retrenchment.

"It's very fine of him," she said. "I hope these business gigolos — rather an appropriate term, don't you think? — heed the professor's advice. Society doesn't want them anyway."

Mrs. Peabody Ends Her Fight On Rum With 'Carry On!' Plea

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody has finished her report of 12 years of dry crusading and will present it to the final meeting of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement tomorrow.

It's a book called "Kidnaping the Constitution," which she has written since repeal.

It closes with a reprint of the Constitution. Mrs. Peabody's last word was:

"Note: Believing the twenty-first amendment to be illegal, we do not give it place here."

She said yesterday she would present her book with a few words of final advice, since she will retire from chairmanship of the committee with its conversion tomorrow into a "League for Political Action."

"Cease education and turn to action," was the principal advice. "The answer to the question, 'How can I change the minds of my Congressman,' is 'change your Congressman.'

"Education fails to change Congressional minds. Political action is the only effective method."

She advocated a new party.

"We do not need a prohibition party since liquor issues are a symptom, the bad breath of diseased Government," she said. "A coalition constitutional party to promote the general welfare is needed."

Another admonition was: "The supreme law which was kidnaped can be ransomed by women's votes."

"My own work is finished," Mrs. Peabody said. "The task is to be done all over again. I shall leave it to younger women."

She gave credit as constitutional defenders to Senators Borah, Sheppard and Capper. Each sent indorsements of her book.

She said: "I would like to see a million copies distributed throughout the country within the next year."

Said Borah: "I congratulate you. It is splendidly done."

Said Sheppard: "It will arouse every thinking American and it will help immensely to restore prohibition."

Soft Coal Men Rally for Fight On Code Today

To Press for Revision of Wage Rates and 7-Hour Day

(Associated Press.)

Bituminous coal operators from widely scattered States last night shaped new attacks on Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson's order reestablishing a seven-hour day and new minimum wage rates for the industry.

The criticism will be presented today at NRA hearings on revision of the bituminous coal code.

Among the groups demanding changes are:

Northern West Virginia operators, who insist that removal of the 24-cent wage differential they have enjoyed for years over western Pennsylvania is wrecking the industry in their section.

Alabama operators, who already have obtained a temporary court injunction against the new wage schedule.

Western Kentucky operators, who are demanding a greater wage differential under Indiana and Illinois.

Tennesseeans in Fight.

Tennessee operators, also demanding a greater differential.

Smokeless operators of southern West Virginia, battling for a revision of their piece rates, which they contend are too high in relation to basic daily rates.

The Progressive Miners of America, a rival of the United Mine Workers, who are seeking recognition and may claim exemption from the shorter day.

Fighting for the maintenance of Johnson's order are the United Mine Workers and several groups of Northern operators. They regard its promulgation as one of the greatest victories yet won in the direction of eventual complete elimination of lower wage scales for the South.

Fred A. Krafft, spokesman of the northern West Virginia operators, said yesterday his group was ready for a last-ditch battle at the hearing to regain the 24-cent differential.

"The principal motives behind the National recovery act—increased employment and increased purchasing power for the worker—will be defeated by the elimination of our wage differential," he said.

Claims 14,000 Idle.

Fourteen thousand miners in the region, he said, have been made idle since the new wage scale went into effect April 1 and failure to restore the differential without changing freight differentials will cripple the northern West Virginia mines.

"The elimination of our differential was not sought by the United Mine Workers, but by Pennsylvania and Ohio operators," Krafft said. "We have been ready to meet the demands for higher wages and shorter hours, but we insist on continuation of the differential."

The Alabama operators, fighting the $4.60 basic daily wage set for Alabama in the scale approved by Johnson, are citing a wage agreement they negotiated with the union March 16, establishing a $3.60 wage.

The injunction they obtained in Federal Court last week restrains the NRA from enforcing the order for 10 days.

Deadly Gas in Wreck, But Tank Cars Hold

Boyce, Va., April 8 (Spl.).—Though four cars left the rails today and 20 yards of track were torn up, and two tank cars of anhydrous ammonia, a deadly poison in gas form, were included in the derailment, wrecking crews restored traffic after five hours without any injuries.

A split wheel on a northbound N. & W. freight train was blamed.

Johns Hopkins Students To Protest War in Strike

Baltimore, April 8 (Spl.).—Students at the Johns Hopkins University have called a one-hour "strike" for next Friday, in protest against war and militarism.

The students, members of the American League Against War and Fascism, will refuse to attend classes between 11 a. m. and noon, as a gesture of protest against what they consider the mounting militaristic spirit. At a meeting yesterday at the university, war was termed a "by-product of capitalism."

Dickinson Hits Charge "Reds" Advise Regime

"Brains Trust" Is Forced to Prove Soundness of Views, He Says.

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Speaking from a year's experience in the Roosevelt "brain trust," Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson last night vigorously denied Dr. William A. Wirt's charges that "radical" professors control Administration policies.

Every idea advanced by the President's advisers must be proved sound and workable or it is tossed into the discard at once, Dickinson said.

"Mr. Roosevelt's trial and error method is distinctly practical and abandons any line of approach which does not prove its soundness by results," the 38-year-old former law professor explained.

Dickinson warmly defended the recovery program, asserting "its good results as a whole are obvious and constitute its justification."

NRA Fought by Wirt.

Wirt, Gary, Ind., school superintendent, who has been subpenaed to appear before a special House Committee tomorrow to name alleged "Red plotters" among the "brain trusters," had declared that NRA is impeding recovery.

Dickinson believed the great diversity of opinions among the "brain trusters" was sufficient in itself to show that there could be no concerted effort by them to swing the Government toward Communism or any other doctrine.

"As far as concerns professors in politics, there are as many different kinds as there are of lawyers and business men," he said. "Some are progressive, some reactionary. Some have limited experience, some have broad and practical experience in business and other fields.

"As far as I am concerned, any theoretical or doctrinaire approach to the depression, whether by professors, lawyers or business men is unsound and opposed to the point of view of the President."

Charges Analyzed.

Holder of many degrees and former teacher at Amherst, Harvard, Pennsylvania and other universities, Dickinson has been a law partner of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), California, and has directed many business surveys.

Dickinson analyzed in detail Wirt's charges that the Roosevelt policies have impeded recovery. Wirt had cited the fact that just before NRA went into effect, business reached levels that only now are being equaled again.

"The so-called recovery in the summer of 1933 was almost entirely due to artificial speeding up by industries to beat the recovery act, which was passed June 16 and was pretty well understood prior to that time," Dickinson said.

"The recovery machinery was not completed until August 1 when the President's reemployment agreement shortening hours without decreasing wages went into effect. Overproduction during June and July naturally was followed by a period of underproduction in September and October.

Points to Upturn.

"Instead of the slump continuing, however, there began in November, when most of the important codes had been adopted and put into effect, a steady upturn back to the high point of last summer.

"All through February and March, automobile production has maintained a weekly figure higher than at any time in 1933 except one single week in July. Electric power production has been maintained at a figure equal to the high point of last summer. Bituminous coal in recent weeks has exceeded last summer's peak of production.

"The same is true of freight car loadings, according to the seasonally adjusted figure.

"In other words, under operation of the recovery statute, we have reached the same point industry reached in attempting to beat the recovery act," Dickinson asserted.

"If you will compare the present conditions of industry with that of a year ago you will find:

"Approximately 4,000,000 more men at work; factory production increased 55 per cent; general business activity increased 40 per cent; the index of bituminous coal production increased 70 per cent; construction contracts increased 200 per cent; steel ingot production increased 240 per cent."

Wirt Probers Spike Charge Of "Shielding"

'Red Revolt' Informant, If Named, Will Face Punishment.

present plan is to cite him for contempt.

Representative McGugin (Republican-, Kansas, charged Saturday that the Democratic majority on the committee was seeking to block an open inquiry into "brain trust" activities. McGugin has repeatedly attacked "a little group of men" in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration as being guilty of "sabotage" against the farm program. He would like to get the activities of Jerome Frank, AAA counsel, and other "brain trusters" under fire at tomorrow's hearing.

Shielding Denied.

O'Connor replied to McGugin that the committee is not shielding anyone, but that the inquiry is concerned directly with Dr. Wirt's statement that a "brain truster" told him last summer:

"We believe that we have Mr. Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream and that the current is so strong that he can not turn back or escape from it. We believe we can keep Mr. Roosevelt there until we are ready to supplant him with a Stalin. We all think that Mr. Roosevelt is only the Kerensky of this revolution."

It was this assertion of Dr. Wirt's, made in a letter to the Committee for the Nation, taht led to the present investigation.

The accusation against the "brain trust" also was part of the educator's recent 10,000-word memorandum, entitled "America Must Lose."

Leading Democrats, including Speaker Rainey, had referred to the Wirt charges as "silly," and had expressed belief the special investigating committee should not dignify the situation by citing the doctor if he refused to name the author of the above statement, in testifying tomorrow.

O'Connor's committee decided, however, in view of Republican charges of "whitewash," to force Dr. Wirt to give names or be cited.

Chicago Voting Captain Slain

Murder Blamed on Party War for Control of "Bloody 20th."

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—An "independent" precinct captain was shot to death today as the result, police believe, of bitter interparty strife for control of the Democratic organization in Chicago's bloody Twentieth Ward.

The victim was Joseph Tierno, 31, who recently bolted the regular organization headed by Alderman A. J. Prignano and threw his support to a "Young Democratic" movement, under the leadership of Daniel Pintozzi, candidate for State representative.

Tierno, as police reconstructed the slaying, was forced into an automobile near his home and shot through the head. The body was tossed onto a vacant lot where it was found.

His slaying capped reports of sluggings and other violence in the turbulent Italian ward, as a prelude to Tuesday's State-wide primary election.

Police said they learned Tierno had won over a number of voters to Pintozzi, who is being opposed by Charles Coia, of the "regular" faction.

The ward is densely populated by Italians and it is a political axiom that as the "Twentieth" goes, so goes Cook County's 250,000 Italian vote."

Dog Buried 8 Days Rescued by Boy Pal

Santa Cruz, Calif. (U.P.).—A wire-haired dog, buried alive for eight days, was rescued here by his playmate, Jack English, 9, from death in a rabbit hole.

The boy and others searched for the dog for eight days without result. While visiting a remote part of a neighbor's yard the English boy heard a faint whine which seemed to come from underground. He investigated and found a rabbit hole caved in. It was believed the dog pursued a rabbit too far into its hole.

Heavens! That Horrible Old Sasquatch Is At Large Again

Vancouver, B. C., April 8 (AP). America's first Sasquatch-catching expedition headed into the mountains of British Columbia today on a hunt for the horrible, hairy, naked bogey-man of Indian legend.

J. F. Blakeney and C. K. Blakeney, brothers, of Sacramento, medical students at the University of California, read reports of frightened tribesmen that the giant baby-snatcher of old had been seen recently in the mountains of Harrison Lake, and determined to attempt to photograph or lasso a "Sasquatch."

The fabled Sasquatch, as described in Indian lore for hundreds of years, is about as villainous a phantasm as ever frightened a little papoose anywhere, but adult Indians also are fearful of the monsters.

They are supposed to lurk in caves and glades of British Columbia, coming out in the twilight to peer moodily into Indian tepees, to glower and snatch at children, to steal food, play diabolical tricks and even kill warriors.

"Our professor of anthropology will be much interested," said the Blakeneys, as they left for the haunts of the Sasquatch.

British Columbia is a happy hunting ground for weird legends, and there is no lack of witnesses who will swear to them, as hundreds have sworn they have seen Ogopogo, the sheep-headed fresh-water serpent of Lake Okanogan, and the two big salt-water sea serpents, Hiaschuckaluck Cadborosaurus and his "wife," Amy.

Cannon Faces Election Law Trial Today

4-Year Fight Ends to Try Militant Bishop on Conspiracy Count.

Armbruster, an accountant of the Department of Justice, who checked up on the findings of three Senate committee investigations to the effect that Cannon and Miss Burroughs received $65,300 from Jameson for their campaign against Smith, and reported only $17,300.

A number of Virginia bankers will testify as to Bishop Cannon's bank accounts during the period when he was directing the campaign which helped put Virginia, Texas, North Carolina and Florida in the Republican column for the first time since reconstruction days.

Robert H. McNeill, chief of the defense counsel, said yesterday it had not been decided whether Bishop Cannon and Miss Burroughs would take the stand.

The present trial was ordered by the United States Supreme Court on January 8, when the validity of an indictment against the bishop and his former secretary was upheld. The indictment was returned by a District of Columbia grand jury in October, 1931. A trial judge sustained a demurrer to the indictment, but this decision was reversed by the District Court of Appeals.

When the United States Supreme Court upheld the Court of Appeals and it was evident he no longer could escape trial, Bishop Cannon urged he be tried at the earliest possible date. His church's general conference on April 22 must pass upon his character as a routine conference procedure, and he expressed confidence in being vindicated.

Charges His Enemies.

Ever a vigorous and spectacular campaigner, despite his approaching 70 years and intermittent ill-health, Bishop Cannon has maintained from the first that the charges against him were instigated by political enemies. He insists he regards United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, who will be prosecutor at his trial, as a political opponent. Both are Virginians.

The Cannon affair did assume political aspects four years ago, when it was the subject of strenuous debate in both houses of Congress.

League Hopes For Arms Cut

Official Sees Accord Soon, Visions Real Reduction.

Geneva, April 8 (AP).—A convention for the limitation of armaments is in sight now, said a high official of the League of Nations tonight.

He said this optimistic opinion was based on talks which Arthur Henderson, president of the Disarmament Conference, now in Geneva, held in London and Paris, together with impressions the league has gained by the general situation.

"I believe that with patience we can get a limitation agreement at the very least," said the official. "France has not closed the door. Who knows—perhaps we will achieve some beginning at a reduction of arms."

The disarmament section of the League of Nations worked feverishly today, although it was Sunday, preparing for Tuesday's meeting.

On the darker side of the picture appear the difficulties of reaching an accord with Germany and of arranging guarantees acceptable to France.

It was said there is apprehension that Russia will not sign any arms convention unless Japan is a participant.

Delegates, including one from Japan, will arrive tomorrow for the Tuesday gathering. Hugh R. Wilson, United States Minister to Switzerland, will represent the United States.

Davis Will Not Visit Arms Meeting Tuesday

London, April 8 (AP).—Norman H. Davis, special United States Ambassador-at-Large, decided today that his presence is not required at Tuesday's meeting of the disarmament conference steering committee in Geneva.

This does not preclude, it was learned, the possibility that a summons will be issued for a full disarmament conference on May 23.

Reed Flays Nazis' Jewish Treatment

'Assassinating Republic,' He Says at Chicago.

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—James A. Reed, former U. S. Senator from Missouri, today declared that the "oppression of the Jews under the Hitler government" was "a brand of shame upon the brow of Germany.

Reed was the principal speaker

Reed was the principal speaker at the conference of the Chicago committee for the defense of human rights against Naziism, attended by more than 2,000 persons.

By the persecution of the Jews, said Reed, Hitler "was assassinating the German republic. Public opinion, he said, would eventually demand the repeal of all anti-semetic acts in Germany.

The humorist and screen actor announced today he will appear at a Hollywood theater beginning about May 1. The appearance will be Rogers' first dramatic role on the stage.

Aid to Perkins Declares Jobs Speed Upturn

Kerwin Tells Group at Richmond Buying Cycle Rises.

Richmond, April 8 (AP).—Hugh L. Kerwin, director of conciliation of the Federal Department of Labor, said in an address here this afternoon that "for the first time in American history wage earners, industry, agriculture and consumers have their rights and interests protected through cooperation with Government under the codes and other agencies designed to bring about recovery."

He addressed a labor institute, conducted cooperatively by the Central Trades and Labor Council of Richmond and the Extension Division of the University of Virginia, on "Labor Under the National Recovery Act."

"The purpose of the recovery program," he said, "is to increase the buying power of the wage earner and farmer so that industry, labor and the general public may benefit by virtue of having a market for firm produce and factory goods."

Kerwin said that wage earners, farmers, employers, investors and the general public have all made gains under the NRA and othtr recovery measures, adding that "increased incomes of wage earners have meant increased purchasing power which has helped to take some industrial concerns out of red ink and into black."

Citing statistics to show a marked increase in both employment and pay rolls "in most of our industries" during the past two months,

"We have still a considerable distance to go before the full complement of labor is reemployed by American industry," he added. "A recent estimate made by the Department of Labor shows that the number of persons employed in the manufacturing durable goods industries in November, 1933, was 2,654,000 as compared with 4,208,000 in November, 1929. Employment in these industries will have to be increased by 37 per cent to return to the level of the latter part of 1929."

The estimate further showed, he added, that the number of persons employed last November in the manufacture of consumption goods was 3,730,000 as compared with 4,468,000 in November, 1929.

James Kerney, Wilson Friend And Aid, Dies

Publisher of Trenton Paper Held War Post in France.

Baltimore, April 8 (AP).—James Kerney, 61, Trenton, N. J., newspaper publisher and close friend of the late President Wilson, died today at Johns Hopkins Hospital of heart disease.

He was a close political ally of President Wilson, and author of the book, "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson."

During the World War, Kerney spent eight months in France as director of official American information, an appointment given him by President Wilson. The French government decorated him with the Legion of Honor Cross.

In 1929, President Hoover vested him with the rank of ambassador as a member of a commission to adjust differences between the United States and the Republic of Haiti.

He was appointed a member of the Court of Errors and Appeals, New Jersey's highest tribunal, in 1931, resigning last year because of failing health.

He was publisher of the Trenton Times.

U. S. Heading For Disaster, Reed Charges

Announces Candidacy for Reelection and Hits New Deal Policies.

A challenge to those who "subscribe to the New Deal" was flung yesterday by Senator David A. Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, in a statement making public the principles on which he will seek reelection.

Unless the present trend of events in Washington is checked, Reed declared, the country will be led "over the brink of uncontroled inflation to complete chaos."

Appealing to the people of Pennsylvania to stand by the Government, "whose foundations were laid within your borders," Reed announced his intention to "resist those experiments of the present Washington Government which I regard as futile and fantastic."

Stresses Crisis.

Reed's statement follows:

"It has been my hope that the Pennsylvania campaign for the United States Senatorship can be fought out on issues. That is still my hope, as it will be my policy. I will not depart from it. Seldom in its history has the country been confronted by a crisis so serious. It is sufficiently serious to submerge all other considerations. I believe that it will, and that in the end the people of Pennsylvania, with their great good sense, will stand steadfast for those things which they know to be right.

"My decision to seek reelection has been reached in the belief that, in addition to advocating those policies to which I am committed, and which are expressed in my record, it is my duty to continue with all the force at my command to resist those experiments of the present Washington government which I regard as futile and fantastic.

"In the name of national recovery, the present Administration has launched the country on a course which, unless soon checked, may well carry us over the brink of inflation to complete chaos, and which even now mortgages the future of our youth and wastes wildly the slowly accumulated savings and present earnings of all the people.

Hits Centralized Control.

"A little band of men in Washington are seeking covertly to change our course as a Nation, to increase the power of the central government, and to substitute for individual initiative a governmental control of all agricultural production and of all business activity. I am against that and I can never support policies which to me seem likely to lead us in that direction.

"In this crisis in our National affairs I should be false to the trust imposed in me by the people of Pennsylvania if I did not carry on the fight for common sense and for proven principles of government such as the Republican party has consistently advocated.

"There is nothing new in the present experiments. There have been dragged out, dressed in modern garb and paraded before the people, the skeletons of most of the fallacies and failures of Governments of the past. Deluded by promises of magic cure, for ancient ills, America is being fed poisons from which it will take decades to recover. The plain people of the Nation, the mothers and the children, the farmers and the workers of the towns, will be the chief sufferers from these mistakes. In announcing my candidacy for reelection, I call upon the people of Pennsylvania to join me in a stern and sincere protest against the wasteful policies which, carried into effect with no warning, without submission to the people, threaten their happiness and security, and invite disaster for the Nation.

Urges Rule by People.

"If elected, I will continue, as heretofore, to support the President when I believe him to be right and to oppose him when I believe him to be wrong. My loyalty and my obligation are to my country and my State, and not to any man or any group. I have sworn to uphold the Constitution, not to uphold policies which in my judgment violate the Constitution. My fight is for the liberties, the justice, the domestic tranquillity, the common defense and the general welfare which the Constitution guarantees to all Americans. I will not willingly suffer those guarantees to become empty words, but will fight for them and against the aggressions of those who would limit or destroy them, as freemen have always fought.

"I do not believe that we can spend out way to prosperity.

"I am unwilling to see destroyed in four years a civilization which has been centuries in building.

"I am opposed to Fascism as strongly as to Communism.

"I believe that, given liberty of expression and action, and a chance to vote freely and honestly the people can be depended on to find a solution for all of their problems. At all costs, they must be told the truth.

"I believe that governments and men who can not stand criticism are those who need it most.

"I believe that only through deliberate discussion can we come to sound, constructive conclusions.

"It was in Pennsylvania that the Declaration of Independence was written. It was in Pennsylvania that the Constitution was framed. From the beginning Pennsylvania has stood steadfastly by that Constitution. I call on the people of Pennsylvania to stand by it now."

U. S. to Start Slum-Clearing Projects Soon

Huge Sums Are Ready for Low Rental Homes in Many Cities.

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—The Government will go slumming with officials of many States this spring—objective: To get rid of their slums.

Men as well as money will be put to work, nuisances abated and crowded urban districts beautified as the Government's housing program is geared higher.

In Washington $600,000 has been earmarked for a housing project on the north side of Omaha. Its allotment hinges only on State legislation giving the city authority to create a housing board. A $400,000 plan for Omaha's south side is under consideration.

Work is expected to start May 1 on two vast housing jobs in Atlanta. Two city blocks and $2,750,000 will be used in construction of Techwood, Inc., low cost apartment of 557 units to rent at $7.50 to $8 a room a month. Another will house 800 Negro families at $4.50 a month for each room.

"Naptune Gardens" will become apartment houses erected at cost of $3,500,000 in East Boston, Mass., as soon as the Government approves plans for the slum eradicating project.

Negotiations are under way for a Federal loan to a housing project in Richmond, Va. The Virginia Legislature recently passed a slum clearance and housing bill.

An insurance company built two low-rent apartments in Newark in place of tenements. A corporation in New Jersey is seeking a loan for the same purpose.

Municipalities in New York State have the permission of the New York Legislature to set up housing bodies and clear slums. Many are watching Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's efforts to rip out tenements in New York City. Many were condemned, but few have fallen.

Four proposals aimed at Baltimore slums are before PWA officials in Washington for approval. They call for modern apartment houses.

Chinese Claim Japanese Seek New Foothold

100 Militarists En Route to Provinces, Reports Peiping Paper.

Peiping, China, April 8 (AP).—More than 100 Japanese military officers, said the Chinese-owned Peiping Chronicle today, have arrived at this former capital, bound for the Provinces and Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi and southern Hopei for the purpose of "getting acquainted" with the chief strategical centers in north China."

The paper said the South Manchurian Railway, Japanese-owned line in Manchukuo, likewise had sent agents into north China, where they now are actively studying economic conditions with the object of strengthening Japanese influence, especially in the costal province of Shantung.

Other Chinese newspapers said Japanese military authorities had requested permission to hold military maneuvers in the demilitarized zone established by treaty following the Japanese military campaign in Manchuria.

The Chinese spurned the request, the papers added.

Other vernacular newspapers claimed that Sino-Japanese negotiations for the return to China of the Malanpu Pass, in the Great Wall near the imperial tombs of Tsing dynasty, have been halted.

They will not be resumed, it was said, before the return to Peiping of Huang Fu, high commissioner of the Nationalists government, who is in the Yangtze Valleys for conference with Chiang Kaishek regarding reestablishment of rail and postal communications with Manchuhukuo, which China does not recognize.

Meanwhile, the Japanese were reported to be building an air field at Malanyu Pass, where 30 airplanes are already based.

Hundreds Send Post's Scholar Award Entries

Brilliant Work Is Done by Students in Their Essays.

With but one more day open for entries in the important division finals of The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, champions of Washington, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia high schools yesterday continued to flood competition headquarters at The Post with their prize essays on governmental topics.

Many of the entrants stand at the top of honor rolls of their respective schools, some holding consistent "A" records throughout their entire four-year course. Contest officials last night agreed that both the division eliminations of essays during the coming week and the subsequent oral and written finals on local university campuses will bring into competition the most talented group of young people ever selected from secondary schools of the Capital's metropolitan area.

Raymond Wrenn, youngest member of the senior class of the Herndon (Va.) High School, was awarded his school championship as the result of a close contest which brought second place to Howard Thornberry, third to Isabel Bates and fourth to May Kammamier. Wrenn, who is but 16, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wrenn, sr., of Herndon. J. H. Rice, principal, reports that his winner has been an "A" student in all subjects during his senior year, and in all but a few gradings during his entire course.

Interested in Journalism.

Wrenn is especially interested in journalism, being editor in chief of his school paper He is also prominent in school dramatics, having played several of the leading roles recently. He is anxious to major in English and journalism at college.

Clare Cohill, honor senior class member of the Hancock, Md., High School, will represent her school with an essay on "The Social Philosophy of the New Deal." Miss Cohill, who is 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Cohill, of Hancock. She rates English and social sciences as her favorite subjects. She is also anxious for training in home economics in her college course.

Ralph Buchanan, head of the Hancock's school's history department, in expressing to The Post appreciation of the competition and suggesting its repitition annually, wrote that his entire problems-in-democracy class of 28 seniors competed and that each of these was carefully drilled for two weeks before being allowed to proceed with the actual essay writing.

George James Stansfield, son of Mrs. James H. Stansfield, of 1812 G street northwest, will represent the local Woodward School for Boys with an essay on "The Influence of Military Leaders on American History." Stansfield, who is 17, is completing his high school course in three years and is one of the top men in his class. He is keenly interested in both social sciences and military matters, his father, the late Col. J. H. Stansfield, having served as judge advocate of the Panama Canal Department during George's boyhood.

A tie in the finals of the Rockville, Md., colored high school was broken on Friday by Edward U. Taylor, school supervisor, who selected Nina Honemond, 16, winner, and named Sara Meads alternate. "Causes and Cures of Unemployment" is the topic of the winning essay. The school's entire senior class wrote essays on this same subject under direction of Henry M. Joyce, civics teacher, and Miss Queene E. McNeill, English teacher. These teachers and Namon Allen, principal, judged the preliminary contests.

An essay on "The Social Philosophy of the New Deal," written by Mary Edwards, 16, won first place in the Taneytown, Md., High School finals. John F. Wooden, principal, was in charge of the preliminaries, in which the senior history class took part.

Miss Dent Wins at Baden.

Marion Dent won the Baden (Md.) Agricultural High School finals with an essay on "The Influence of Military Leaders on American History." Dudley C. Aist, history teacher, was in charge of the school competition, participated in by all juniors, as well as seniors. W. R. C. Connick, principal, assisted in the judging.

Joseph Istvan, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Istvan, of Hughesville, Md., won the Hughesville High School finals with a paper on "Theory and Practice of the NRA." Istvan is honor man of his class and is ambitious to major in social sciences if he wins one of the university scholarship awards.

Three Fauquier County, Va., school's submitted entries as follows: "The Influence of Military Leaders on American History," by Sally Winn Chappelear, of the Marshall High School; "The World Court," by Ruth Woodzell, of the Warrenton High School, and "The Monroe Doctrine and Pan-Americanism," by Samuel Read, of the Calverton High School. Each of these champions defeated large groups of classmates in their preliminaries.

Other Virginia entries included: "The Reorganization of Local Government," by Caroline Custer Yates, of the Stony Point High School; "The Monroe Dostrine and Pan-Americanism," by Frances Lamm, of the Elkton High School; "The Depressions of 1837, 1873, 1893 and 1929," by Charles Newton Liskey, of the New Market High School; "The Problem of National Defense," by Moncure Lyon, of the Leesburg High School; "The Influence of Military Leaders on American History," by Louise Beach, of the Haymarket High School; "The Monroe Doctrine and Pan-Americanism," by Martyne McComb, of the Lincoln High School, and "The Depressions of 1837, 1873, 1893 and 1929," by Clara M. Marlowe, of the Clark County Training School at Berryville.

From Maryland schools came the following: "The Influence of the Supreme Court on American History," by Blair Harper, of the Manchester High School; "The Gold Standard or Managed Currencies," by Louis Shuman, Great Mills High School; "Causes and Cures of Unemployment," by Jane Elizabeth Brightful, of Robert Moten High School, at Westminster; a paper on the same subject by Peter H. Kreigh, of Clear Spring High School; "The Social Philosophy of the New Deal," by Virginia Ragan, Margaret Brent High School, at Mechanisville.

West Virginia entries included: "National Security and International Cooperation," by Jane Dailey, Bunker Hill High School, and "Inflation Pro and Con," by Kermit Vermilyea, Hedgesville High School.

Joseph C. Michalowicz, of Gonzaga High School; Frances Leaman, of St. Paul's Academy, and Jay D. Robertson, of George Mason High School, through error, were designated as division winners in a caption under their photographs in yesterday's Post. Division entries will not be considered until after the official closing of all entries tonight. Division winners, who will be announced in The Post on April 15, will receive silver medals and will progress into the project's finals on the campuses of American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard Universities, where winners of four-year tuition scholarships will be determined.

Roosevelt to Sign Civil Service Shift

these functions to the Civil Service Commission.

This constituted the second action Mr. Roosevelt has taken in his executive capacity since his vacation began 10 days ago. At the same time he also issued a proclamation as President, designating May 1 as Child Health Day, urging a "deeper realization" of the necessity of promoting child welfare.

Fishing Probe Today.

From Congress, Government and child health, the President's interest tomorrow will shift back to fishing. For at noon he has agreed to a formal investigation into the truth of his son Elliott's "gross libel" of his fishing.

Final arrangements for the meeting, confirmed late today by the President with no suggestion of delay, gave rise to the impression Mr. Roosevelt is confident he has sufficient evidence to combat his son's intimations. Vincent Astor, the President's host, has reported the Nourmahal's aquarium is well-stocked—by whom he failed to mention.

In order to meet the White House correspondents, who will travel to the rendezvous in a Gar Wood cruiser, the Nourmahal at dusk weighed anchor off Aquila Island and headed Northward. The court will convene some 50 miles at sea, somewhere near Cat Kay, directly East of Miami.

The Nourmahal radioed to White House headquarters today that fishing had been in abeyance during the day while the President rested on deck. During the afternoon, however, Mr. Roosevelt was in command of a seine to add specimens to the yacht's aquarium.

father and mother first met and became engaged.

In Cannes at the same time was Ingrid's brother, the former Prince Sigvard, and his German bride, for whom he sacrificed all pretentions to royal prerogatives.

Visiting Stockholm some weeks earlier, Prince Frederick tartly denied reports of an alliance with the Swedish royal house, but it was considered significant then that he spent much time in Princess Ingrid's company.

The match would be considered most favorable to both royal families, since in Swedish eyes Frederick is considered a most acceptable suitor for Ingrid's hand, while the Danish royal family looks upon Ingrid as a most desirable consort for the future king.

Political powers in both countries favor the engagement as portending a strengthening of Scandinavian links. It also was seen as creating an important alliance between Denmark and Great Britain, since Ingrid's late mother was a daughter of the Duke of Connaught.

Sigvard May See King.

Cannes, France, April 8 (AP).—Thwarted in efforts to regain King Gustaf's favor on the Riviera, Prince Sigvard of Sweden was believed ready today to try again in Paris.

He and his commoner bride, the former Enrika Patzek, German film actress, left here unexpectedly on a mysterious automobile trip.

Although Sigvard gave a Berlin hotel as a forwarding address, the couple were believed en route to Paris, where the King will go tomorrow for a week.

Bill to Seek Restored Air Mail Awards of developing the volume of mail and fostering commercial aviation, for the purpose of promoting the National defense, improving our National position in industry and commerce, and making air transportation self-supporting."

Vital to Nation.

"It is beyond question," the statement said, "that commercial aviation, as fostered and supervised by governmental authority, is vital to our National security and has already become an essential service for the business of the country.

"The amendment attempts to assure the future status of the air-mail operators and remove uncertainty and insecurity in order to encourage long-time planning.

"The amendment recognizes that competitive bidding is not adapted to the situation. In the words of Capt. Rickenbacker: 'To ask any one of these companies to bid on another route than its own is as impractical as asking the New York Central Railroad to bid to carry mail over the Stanta Fe System.'"

The aims of the Austin-Barbour-Davis amendment are given as:

Preservation of the benefits obtained for the public under the McNary-Watres act, and to prevent the setting back of the industry to condition of five years ago.

Assurance to the people that their Government is honest and honorable as a contractor with its citizens.

Reestablishment of justice and reaffirmation that no person shall be deprived of property without due process of law.

Preservation of the control of the Government over combinations for the purpose of preventing reduction or elimination of competition on the one hand, and ruinous competition on the other.

Provision of a subsidy by way of additional pay based upon improvement of efficiency, development of safety, additional space for carriage of passengers and express, and promotion of the National defense.

Man Is Beaten, Robbed By Gang at 6th and M

Donald W. Toulouse, of the 1700 block of G street northwest, told police yesterday he was beaten and robbed by a gang of colored men in an alley near Sixth and M streets northwest.

Toulouse said the men knocked him down and rifled his pockets, taking a gold watch, a small amount of money and a pair of glasses. Police of the Second Precinct later arrested a man who was identified as one of Toulouse's assailants. He said he was William Massey, 22, of the 400 block of N street northwest.

Tax Boost Faces Snag in Roosevelt

mittee which did the spade work on the pending bill.

Always political dynamite, the revenue bill is even more explosive this year with all members of the House up for reelection. The proposed 10 per cent increase would dip into the pockets of millions of voters and conceivably could decide the political fate of scores of Congressmen who rode into office on the Roosevelt landslide and now face hard battles at home.

House Defeat Forecast.

Shrewd political observers last night predicted that the Couzens amendments, if adopted, would be stricken from the measure when the bill goes in conference with the House. They recalled previous occasions when similar controversial proposals were approved by the Senate only to be torpedoed in conference.

Less opposition is expected from the lower House to an amendment by Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, sharply increasing estate tax rates. This proposal provides for a maximum tax rate of 60 per cent on estates in excess of $10,000,000, as compared with 45 per cent in existing law and 50 per cent recommended by the Senate Finance Committee. Harrison said he was prepared to accept this compromise.

Changes in the revenue bill as approved by the House and those which Harrison has indicated his committee would accept would raise the original estimate tax yield of the bill from $258,000,000 to $477,000,000.

Higher Surtaxes Acceptable.

House leaders indicated that they were not opposed to changes in the surtax schedule imposing higher levies on incomes from $6,000 to $32,000, as approved by the Senate. They insisted, however, that the present state of the Treasury does not warrant the increased burden which they said the Couzens amendment would impose upon the small taxpayer at this time.

In support of their claim, they pointed to Harrison's statement, when he was opposing the La Follette "soak-the-rich" amendment, that the Administration would be satisfied with changes proposed by the committee which would insure a balanced budget in 1936. The day after he made this statement, Harrison announced he would accept the Couzens amendment.

But even now, it was pointed out, activities must be curtailed because the Traffic Bureau lacks an adequate force. (Pity the poor motorists should it be increased.)

Tanguay Wants To 'Come Back' And Aid Blind

Frivolous No Longer, Eva Says Sightless Days Inspired Her.

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—The frivolous Eva Tanguay, of the "I don't care" era, has entirely disappeared.

Today she wants to stage a comeback, but it's principally because she desires to gives her earnings to restore the sight of blind children.

You wouldn't know the current Eva as the girl who once went through a fortune of $2,000,000 in pursuit of the elusive "good time" typified by the carefree attitude of her starring number.

Somewhat somberly, convalescing from her most recent operation to restore her own sight, Miss Tanguay sat in her Loop hotel room here today and looked hopelessly to a future on the stage or screen.

"I want to give a comeback," she said. "And I can. I still can dance; I still can sing."

"But it's not for myself that I want to do it. I know that sounds funny coming from the original 'I-don't-care girl,' but here's the idea—I lost my sight. It was terrible. I regained my sight; that was glorious. I want others to do the same."

"I'd like," she said, "to make enough money to endow a hospital to treat the sightless eyes of children. You know, the last stage appearance I made here in Chicago—and that wasn't so long ago—they had to put three hidden bright lights in the bright footlights so I would know where I was on the stage. I couldn't even see footlights or the audience!"

She became ill several years ago, but disdained medical science and put her faith in what she termed "quacks." She got no better.

In 1932—too proud to tell friends—she was discovered critically ill of a heart ailment in Hollywood. Whether she liked it or not friends shoved her into a hospital and saw that she received proper treatment. She recovered. Then one eye developed a cataract. A Chicago doctor removed it. Then the other eye went bad from the same thing. This caused her to return recently for another successful operation.

Oil Companies To Trial Today For Price Cuts

Pacific Coast Firms Are Accused of Violating Trade Code.

Los Angeles, April 8 (AP).—Three groups of large Pacific Coast oil companies, their officers and directors, are to be arraigned here tomorrow on indictments charging violation of the oil industry's code of fair competition.

General demurrers denying the charges have been filed by the defendant companies.

Indicted as receiver for the Richfield Oil Co., William C. McDuffie is to be arraigned later.

In general charges are that the code was violated by a scheme in which posted prices of gasoline were evaded through an arrangement between major companies and subsidiaries controlled by them.

Third grade gasoline, it was charged, was produced by major companies and sold by them at one price, but distributed to the secondary concerns and sold under different names at a lower price.

This was described in the charges as vicious price-cutting system, imperiling small and actually independent oil companies.

Sixty-one officers and directors were indicted.

Among those indicted are:

Standard Oil Co. of California and its alleged subsidiaries, Signal Oil of California and Signal Oil & Gas Co. of Delaware.

Associated Oil Co. and Seaside Oil Co.

Shell Oil Co. and Guardian Oil Co.

In McDuffie's indictment, Richfield is named as owner and controller of the Rockett Oil Co.

The indictments followed an extensive investigation during which District Attorney Pierson M. Hall, of Los Angeles, was in Washington for a month.

Police said Fergerson apparently fell into the darkened areaway and was unable to summon aid. He was found by a passerby shortly before dawn.

Trade Views Asked On Airport for D. C.

Thomas P. Littlepage, of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, has been asked by the District Commissioners to draft a memorandum of the views of trade and civic associations on the question of an airport at Gravelly Point.

The Commissioners were recently urged by a committee from the associations to reconsider their report to Congress, in which the board opposed the airport because of the need for schools and other municipal buildings.

Although the Commissioners do not intend at this time to send a favorable report on the airport bill, it is their desire that the views of the associations be brought to the attention of the House and Senate District Committees.

Exiled Czarists Stage New York Celebration

New York, April 8 (AP).—Exiles of the former Imperial Russian Empire carried on today in Madison avenue as if the czar still reigned.

The "white" Russians of the city—noblemen, former members of the Emperor's government, army and navy officers, and many others who escaped the revolution—gathered in the antiquated church of Christ The Savior to celebrate the old calendar Easter of the Russian Orthodox faith.

Big U. S. Fleet Begins 30-Day 'War' on Ocean

102 Ships Leave Pacific for East Coast in Battle Array.

San Pedro, Calif., April 8 (AP).—A 30 days' "war" on the high seas, in theory and strategical practice, comes with the dawn tomorrow for 35,000 officers and men on 102 war vessels of the United States Navy, when the fleet leaves southern California bases.

Battle practice, almost continuously, will mark the 6,000-mile cruise from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast. The squadrons of dreadnaughts, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, aircraft carriers, with their auxiliaries and their 300 aircraft, will be gone from the bases here and at San Diego, for at least eight months.

Admiral D. F. Sellers, aboard his flagship, the dreadnaught Pennsylvania, is commander in chief of the great armada, the designation of which is the United States Fleet.

During most of the time between now and May 10, however, the armada will be split up into two opposing high seas fleets, the dispositions changing from time to time, and command resting with the senior officers of the units involved in these battle practices.

Most of the tactical exercises will find Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, commander of the battle force, as chief of one fleet, with Vice Admiral Frank Hardeman Brumby, of the scouting force, commander of the opposing fleet.

Shortly after the cruise is terminated at New York, Admiral Sellers will haul down his four-starred blue flag as commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and relinquish the post to Admiral Reeves.

Italians Venerate Newly Made Saint

Turin, Italy, April 8 (AP).—Despite rains, thousands of devotees and admirers of the Saint Don Bosco, canonized by the Pope Easter Sunday, today witnessed a solemn procession bearing an urn containing his remains through the city.

It was taken to its resting place in Maria Ausiliatrice Basilica. Numerous princes of the House of Savoy, seven cardinals and high civil authorities participated in the ceremonies, witnessed by hundreds of Argentine pilgrims.

Lutheran Church Disregards Nazis, Hears Old Pastor

Dahlen, Germany, April 8 (AP).—Dahlen's Lutheran Congregation worshiped quietly today with no sign of the anticipated climax of a dispute over possession of the pulpit in Germany's Protestant Church "war."

The Rev. Mr. Scharsenderg, appointed by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller to fill the pulpit he had declared vacant, did not appear.

In defiance of Mueller's order, the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, foe of the Reichsbishop's program for unifying the German church, preached the sermon. Elders of the church had refused to accept Mr. Scharsenderg.

That trouble was anticipated was indicated by the early rush for seats in the church, which has a capacity of 1,300. Pews, aisles and stairways were jammed. The only sign of Nazi attendance was one uniformed youth.

The text of the sermon was "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith," from the fifth chapter of the First Epistle of John.

Virginia Seeks Way to Divorce Politics, Liquor

Party Faithful Wait for Plums Despite Byrd's Merit Proposal.

By J. K. Irving, jr.

Charlottesville, Va., April 8.—While the Virginia alcoholic beverage board moves toward opening the State stores, the matter of keeping the liquor administration entirely out of politics presents itself. Senator Byrd sponsors the move and issues a statement suggesting that the powers be guided solely by the fitness of applicants for the positions they seek. It is a fine gesture, but little else. How will it be possible to keep politics out of so fruitful an opportunity?

Very sensibly, Senator Byrd calls attention to the fact that the State needs more than ever a business-like administration; that it is more important for liquor to be handled with an eye toward temperance rather than for revenue alone. The alcoholic beverage control board lost no time in indorsing his policy. There was no need for Gov. Peery to give it his o. k. because everyone knows how close he is to the Senator. They are both dry.

But how politics are to be kept out of the situation is something more than the wise ones can figure out. To begin with, members of the board, however well-fitted they may be, are there a good deal more by virtue of their party standing than for any other reason. There is no way of denying that. McCall Frazier, for example, who was taken from his position as motor vehicle director and placed in the group, is looking after the principal appointments all along the line. He is an appointee of the Pollard administration, who knows his business whatever the assignment. And why should John Q. Rhodes, a member of the Legislature, have succeeded him in the highway position save that he was a member of the select circle?

Without criticism, there is hardly any way to suggest that Virginia could possibly establish her liquor stores without an intermixture of politics. The people expect it and should it not be forthcoming they will be vastly disappointed. The Legislature passed the act and those who supported the members thereof are looking for their deserved rewards. If they are disappointed, ructions will arise. All the lines are laid for a general distribution.

Besides, the patronage probers, here and elsewhere, will be forced to investigate. No matter how much they respect the Byrd statement, it is hardly possible that they can go back on their formally adopted policy, even though they have received a clear plan of conduct from Washington.

Shown above are Mrs. Alton Y. Bennett and Charles E. Hudson, who enacted two of the principal roles in "Pirate Gold," a benefit musical comedy presented last week at Frederick, Md., for the American Legion post's home building fund. The show was given two nights.

Legion Buries Confederates

Hagerstown Post Gives Military Funeral to Three Alabamans Whose Remains Recently Were Unearthed at Gettysburg.

Hagerstown, Md., April 8 (Spl.). Three Alabama soldiers of the Civil War who died at the Battle of Gettysburg, were buried with impressive ceremonies this afternoon in the Washington Confederate Cemetery here.

The funeral was in charge of Morris Frock Post, American Legion, Hagerstown, arrangements having been made by Harry E. Fiery, commander of the legion post, Capt. John Kyd Beckinbaugh, superintendent of Antietam Battle Field, and Capt. Carl H. McCleary, in command of Company B, Maryland National Guard.

A small casket containing the remains, recently unearthed on the Gettysburg Battle Field, lay in state in front of the war memorial at the courthouse.

The procession later proceeded to the cemetery and include State and local police, colors and color guards, color bearers from the Sons of Confederate Veterans of Shepherdstown, W. Va.; the Rev. J. Edward Harms, chaplain; buglers, hearse and pallbearers, members of the National Park Service, firing squad from Company B, legion colors and legionnaires. The casket was draped with a Confederate flag.

The military funeral service took place at the rostrum in Washington Cemetery.

Today's ceremony was possibly the last burial of Confederate soldiers in this section. About 3,000 Confederate soldiers, who lost their lives at Antietam, are buried in the cemetery.

Surplus Shown In Brentwood

Share of Gas Tax Pulls Town Out of Money Difficulties.

The town of Brentwood, Md., which has been financially embarrassed for some time, now reports a balance of $645 in the general fund with all bills paid. There also is said to be $1,257 in the road fund and $414 in the fire tax fund.

A delay in receiving the town's share of the gasoline tax fund from the State roads commission caused a serious financial condition several months ago and necessitated the discontinuance of several services. This fund was received recently.

Road repair work is getting under way again and a complete restoration of the roads is expected shortly.

Garbage collections, which had to be suspended, have been resumed on a twice-a-week basis. A clean-up period, to take care of trash accumulation, in as much as the regular service has not been restored, has been set by the mayor and council for April 16, 17 and 18.

Mayor Loyd V. Moxley announced that he will appoint a committee soon which will cooperate with the town's volunteer fire department after Chief James E. Sampson expressed a desire for closer relationships between his organization and the town officials.

Charlottesville, Va., April 8 (Spl.). A building permit has been issued to W. Eskridge Duke, local attorney, for the erection of a $25,000 amusement center and theater between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets on West Main street, near the University of Virginia.

The building is on the site of the Ambroselli Tavern, known throughout Virginia in the seventies as a favorite night spot of university students.

Designs for the building and its furnishings will harmonize inside and outside with the Jeffersonian period. Cost of the exterior of the building will be $8,000, seating capacity, 400.

The design for the playhouse has been drawn by Milton L. Gregg, local architect and recent winner of the President's award in the Better Homes contest conducted annually throughout the United States.

Frederick, Md., April 8 (Spl.).—The cost of repairing roads in the Frederick district, embracing Frederick, Montgomery, Carroll and Howard Counties, on account of winter was placed at approximately $62,000 by Thomas M. Linthicum, district road engineer.

Repairs to State highways will cost about $36,678 and to county roads, $25,223. Work has been started on the highways and is expected to be completed in about a month. The repairing consists largely of patching "frost boils."

Many of the county roads have been badly washed by rains and will require considerable surface work. One-mile stretches of State road being constructed between this city and Yellow Springs and Woodsboro and Libertytown are nearly completed.

Voting Week Away, Ballots Still Blank

Friday evening's program will be given by the Old Harp Singers of Nashville, Tenn., under the direction of George Pullen Jackson, author of "White Spirituals in the Southerland Uplands." They will present folk hymns, carols and ancient "fuguing tunes" from old Southern hymnals, such as "Evening Shade," "Piagah," and "Morning Trumpet," in traditional "Faso-la" style, three-part or four-part; the nine singers, soprano or "trible," tenor or "lead," alto or "counter" and bass, seated around a table.

Roanoke, Va., April 8 (AP).—Alma Smith, 45, chief deputy collector of internal revenue here, died yesterday from a self-inflicted bullet wound, fired into his head as he sat at his desk in the Federal Building.

The coroner said it was a clear case of suicide.

A short, incoherent note, addressed to Hubert S. Thomas, a deputy marshal, was found on his desk, but it failed to disclose a motive for his act.

Rockingham Plans Corn-Hog Program

Harrisonburg, Va., April 8 (Spl.).—The Rockingham Corn-Hog Production Control Association organization will be completed here Tuesday at a meeting of the five directors and local committeemen.

Contract signers elected a director for each magisterial district at meetings held this week. The organization is more compact than that under the wheat program in which each community had a director.

With more than 600 contract signers, it is estimated that the corn-hog program will bring approximately $90,000 to the farmers of Rockingham.

In addition to the nature classes, Mr. Boggs will conduct the final game in the 4-H information tournament. The winners of each section in the county are being chosen by elimination contests.

The three dormitory buildings, the center being flanked on each side at an angle by smaller units connected to the main building by an arcade, will house 208 students. It will cost $236,471. J. F. Virginia's FERA Program Delayed

Work Is Expected to Start Middle of Week.

Richmond, April 8 (AP).—State CWA Administrator W. A. Smith said today he saw no possibility of the new FERA program, particularly the works division, getting into effective operation before Wednesday or Thursday.

The delay, he said, is attributed to the mass of detail involved in closing the old program and inaugurating the new.

Auditors and accountants of the 125 local administrations throughout the State are attempting to set up uniform systems and records.

Democrats Call Vote In Seventh District

Harrisonburg, Va., April 8 (AP).—The Seventh District Democratic committee at a meeting here yesterday afternoon decided to hold a primary for the nomination of a candidate for the House of Representatives from this district instead of calling a convention.

Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, incumbent, is the only avowed candidate, and indications are that he will have no opposition.

Shirt Off His Back? Non, Non! Pants? Qui!

Paris, (U.P.).—Unable to pay the tax collector, Louis Deshouillieres, 70, put on his Sunday clothes and went to the tax collector's office. He disrobed and handed the suit over the counter.

"Here you are," he said, "I haven't any money. Take these and leave me alone."

Shivering in his shirt and underwear, he tried to creep home unobtrusively, but, unfortunately, news photographers caught him, and his heavy woolens were exhibited to the public in print the following day.

The amount of the unpaid taxes was 300 francs.

ABC to Grant Unprotested Permits First

Hundreds of Protests to Virginia Board Bring Liquor Probe.

Richmond, April 8 (AP).—Hundreds of protests against granting wine and beer licenses in certain localities or to certain individuals which the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has received from church organizations and other sources have caused the board to rule that non-protested licenses will be granted first, it was announced today.

The board pointed out that a certain percentage of the applications will undoubtedly be refused after investigation by its inspection service.

"License applications to which there have been protests are being held in suspension temporarily, pending the investigation of applicants against whom no protest has been filed," an official statement said.

Meanwhile, T. K. Sexton's inspection force planned to begin the work of checking applications tomorrow morning. The inspection division of the board will make a report on each applicant which will include a description of the applicant's store, the name of the owner, the suitability of the place for beverage sale, the number of other similar establishments in the neighborhood, the distance of the store from churches and schools, the reputation of the establishment and the character of the applicant.

The board expressed the hope that by thus making a close check on each applicant the necessity for a large number of hearings could be avoided.

Plans for wine distribution are being put forward.

Brooks to Battle For Laborer Raise

Portsmouth Council Leader Feels Pay Too Low.

Portsmouth, Va., April 8 (Spl.).—Dr. Vernon Brooks, councilman and admitted leader of the faction in local municipal politics which was universally successful in last Tuesday's primary, stated yesterday that, regardless of when the new council is organized, he will fight for raises to begin with the lowest brackets in the city government and for cuts to start with higher salaries.

During the campaign, in which Dr. Brooks was a target for the "administration" speakers and was spokesman for the "outs," although not a candidate, he attacked the administration for paying labor a scale of wages that would enable them to earn $12 per week.

His statement yesterday indicated he took seriously the matter of raising wages of street hands and men working on a per hour basis.

Shultice Backed For Postmaster

Norfolk, Va., April 8 (Spl.).—Robert W. Shultice, lawyer and prominent Democratic leader in the second Congressional District of Virginia, will be the next postmaster of Norfolk unless yesterday's recommendation of Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the Second District, to President Roosevelt meets with effective opposition in the Senate.

L. C. Page, who has held the position under Republican rule, resigned several weeks ago and his resignation is still before President Roosevelt for action.

Mr. Shultice was formerly chairman of the district Democratic committee and chairman of the Norfolk executive committee of the Democratic party.

Skyline Drive Opening Halted Until Oct. 15

U. S. Extends Time for Surfacing Road 45 Days.

By J. R. Lineweaver.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 8.—New obstacles will postpone the opening of the Skyline Drive from Panorama to Swift Run until October 15, and the formal transfer of the 170,000 acres of Blue Ridge Mountain land by Virginia to the Federal Government for conversion into the Shenandoah National Park will be delayed until about September 1, William E. Carson, chairman of the Virginia conversion commission declared here today.

The Federal Government, Mr. Carson said, has extended the time limit for the completion of the hard surfacing of the Skyline Drive for 45 days, which will be around October 15. To avoid accidents, he added, the National Park Service will not allow tourists on the scenic mountain drive during its construction. Mr. Carson added, however, that he intends to bring all possible pressure upon Federal authorities to have the work completed by Labor Day.

Delay in the formal transfer of the Blue Ridge Mountain land for a National park was caused by an order of Secretary Ickes that 465 families, involving 2,000 men, women and children, must be removed from the park area before the Government will accept it for park purposes. Mr. Carson fears it will take all summer to find new homes.

The title and purchase record under the law, he said, can not be turned over to the Federal Government until after April 26, 30 days following the last court order for condemnation. After the expiration of this date, the record will be given to Federal attorneys.

The conservation commission is working on plans for the formal transfer of the park area on Labor Day, when Carson hopes to have President Roosevelt there to hand him the deed in the name of the State of Virginia.

"—A MOTORIST NEEDS TO WATCH HIS NERVES, TOO, MR. TILDEN"

W. E. Richards, Jr. of Lansford, Pa., who rode nearly 20,000 miles in his car last year, says:

"I'm a real tennis fan, Mr. Tilden, and I know it takes healthy nerves to play championship tennis year after year. But don't forget, it takes healthy nerves to drive a car, too. Trying to see your way in blinding fog or rain...skids...other drivers taking quick, unexpected turns—all are enough to give any man 'traffic jitters'! And yet driving never bothers me a bit. Smoke? I'll say I do. Morning, noon, and night. But I stick to Camels because then I know I can forget all about nerves. And Camels sure taste great!"

William T. Tilden, II, seven times world tennis champion and winner of countless other titles, says:

"Tournament play in tennis imposes a terrific strain upon the nervous system. Healthy nerves are essential if a player is going to be successful in maintaining his speed, endurance, and the psychology of victory. As a steady smoker, I find that cigarettes vary a lot in their effect upon the nerves. I have tried all the other popular brands, but for years I have smoked Camels. Because of their extraordinary mildness I know that I can smoke Camels as freely as I wish and still have healthy nerves."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Jittery nerves are everywhere in modern life. You know them by such signs as these—foot-tapping, key-rattling, nail-biting—frowning and worrying.

If your nerves are not all they should be, study your habits that might affect them—your eating, your sleeping, your recreations. And get a fresh slant on your smoking by starting on Camels.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand.

Camels never get on your nerves. You can smoke one after another...with increasing enjoyment. Camels are so mild, so delicate—packed with the pleasure of finer, costlier tobaccos! The more you smoke them the more you'll like them.

Innocents Abroad.

History was made this past week when 250 Congressmen, their wives, and children, went on a Spring junket to New York—and paid their own way. They were whisked to the top of the Empire State, right past Al Smith's office; they attended a radio broadcast, were ferried about the harbor on fireboats, saw the aquarium, shook hands with Sol Bloom, and some of them visited the Stock Exchange. Wherever they went they quite proudly announced that they were paying their own expenses. That, of course, is what made the trip news.

Although it is a grand idea for Congressmen to learn something about institutions they try to legislate out of existence, we are afraid that skeptics will see something insidious in this particular journey. Was its director, Sol Bloom, inspired by Wall Street gold? That is what the doubters will want to know. And someone is sure to demand an investigation, or, at least, a probe.

We quote Mr. Bloom's comment after conducting his guests through the exchange: "Some of them thought the exchange was a terrible place, but found out it wasn't so bad after talking with some of the traders." This should be looked into!

With legislation seriously affecting those very same traders now before Congress, it is a pretty serious matter for 50 of our lawmakers to let themselves be led into such a trap! Imagine turning innocent Congressmen among the bears and bulls of Wall Street! How can any of them go up to Capitol Hill now and damn the international bankers; how can they again blow down the House of Morgan with their oratory? Have they not been tainted beyond redemption by their visit?

Something ought to be done about this! There oughta be a law!

What's In A Name?

The Senate Finance Committee has decided to recommend a 10 per cent emergency tax applicable to personal incomes. That is, the tax would not be levied on incomes proper, but on the taxes paid under the so-called permanent rates. This ingenious device is presumably intended to soften the blow of an added charge by pretending that it is a temporary imposition that will vanish with a passing emergency. Subterfuges of this sort are transparent to all who have any knowledge of our recent fiscal history. Nevertheless, pretensions that we are budgeting to cover rapidly disappearing emergency outlays are mischievous. Congress ought to have the courage to admit that we shall need to collect so-called emergency taxes not only next year but probably for some years to come, if we wish to avoid steadily increasing the public debt.

No government can estimate far ahead the amounts required to balance its budget. The realistic way to deal with the varying requirements of successive years is to raise or lower rates, as conditions demand. It is stupid to cling to some predetermined schedule, changing it reluctantly, at irregular intervals, and trying to minimize the importance of an increase by calling it a temporary or emergency addition to regular levies.

The Tuberculosis Study.

No investigation of tuberculosis in Washington is needed to establish the desirability of more adequate facilities to fight the disease. District officials are well aware of the fact that this important community health problem has been neglected. Nevertheless, the committee of surgeons appointed by the Commissioners has a most important function. Its findings will serve to bring the urgent need for an adult tuberculosis hospital to the attention of Congress, and it is expected to suggest other practical ways and means of reducing the high death rate from this malady in Washington.

It is encouraging to note that all of the agencies interested in the problem are represented on the committee. Uncertainty over the most desirable form of reorganization of the District Health Department ought not to interfere with this essential public health project. When a report carrying the united indorsement of the District health officer, the District Medical Society and the United States Public Health Service is presented to the Commissioners, they will have a cogent argument for presentation to those officials who control the District purse strings.

In a recent series of articles on Washington's slums The Post showed how tuberculosis is a menace to every family living in crowded and unsanitary alley dwellings and how it spreads from these centers of infection to other parts of the city. It is gratifying to note that the Medical Society is concentrating its efforts upon this problem. Professional groups have a fine opportunity here to mobilize public opinion behind essential improvements in which appointive officials may have only dormant interests. Because of their disfranchisement Washington citizens must rely upon civic, professional and business organizations and the press to make their wishes articulate.

The District needs more and not less local influence in its governmental affairs. Professional groups do well to resist every tendency toward the delegation of local powers to Federal officers as well as the distribution of local positions on a political basis. At the same time they can render invaluable aid to the Commissioners by investigating community needs and consulting at the District Building on broad questions of policy.

Highway Or Thicket?

Plans for an extensive housing program to be sponsored by some Federal agency are beginning to take definite shape. According to Frank C. Walker, director of the National Emergency Council, Congress will be asked to guarantee mortgage loans for the purpose of stimulating construction. Sponsors of the plan are working on the theory that banks and other financing agencies will lend money for home building if the Government stands behind them with some sort of insurance.

Replies to the recent query of The Post regarding the securities act indicate that many financial institutions would be delighted to put their surplus funds into profitable investments. But in planning an extensive campaign for the construction and improvement of homes other factors must be considered. How many families can afford to build homes under present conditions? Even if interest rates should be reduced to a minimum under mortgages guaranteed by the Government, the building of a home would nevertheless remain a formidable obligation for the average family. During this period of uncertainty and continued unemployment no great rush to borrow money for home construction can be expected, so long as sound business principles are adhered to.

Residential building in most parts of the country was almost at a standstill last year. In trying to stimulate construction of this type the Administration is aiming at the most acute aspect of the depression. The question at issue, however, is not one of diagnosis, but of applying a practical remedy. Ordinarily the construction industry does not lead a recovery procession. Building activity follows recovery in other lines as a logical consequence of profits in business and industry and good wages for labor. It is doubtful whether any headway can be made by trying to create an artificial demand for new homes before purchasing power has been more fully restored.

The objective of the Administration in giving the construction industry a shot in the arm might be more effectively achieved by revising the securities act so that capital would normally flow into new enterprises. Its purpose appears to be increased activity in the heavy industries. With the removal of legislative impediments, industrial development might now be expected. Investment of new capital would automatically stimulate building and employment. As one desirable result of the consequent improvement, the market for new homes would be enhanced. In this way the Administration could lay a substantial foundation for a housing program, instead of trying to create an artificial demand. When a broad highway leads toward the objective sought it is not practical to try beating a new path through a thicket.

Carter Glass.

Senator Glass' courageous hostility toward the New Deal typifies the feelings of many stalwart characters in both parties. Few of these men in the ranks of the Democratic Party have been as candid as Senator Glass. Yet in private they express grave fears that the country is being led into a quagmire of experimentation and uncoordinated policies which menace the liberties cherished by the American people for more than a century and a half.

The Senator from Virginia has clung with remarkable tenacity to those principles he believes—from a rich background of experience—to be right. Throughout the clamor of the last year for hasty enactment of revolutionary legislation he has stood in calm, undismayed and vigorous opposition. Occasionally he has compromised, but for the most part his biting sarcasm has been directed against the New Deal because he believes that it is carrying us away from "the dictates of common sense and common honesty."

Aside from its sincerity, Senator Glass' criticism is influential because he deals with fundamental principles. In the legislative melee last spring members of Congress cast basic principles to the wind. Every measure was tinctured by the theory that rash action is justified by emergency. In contrast to this careless attitude, Senator Glass has persistently tried to keep basic issues before Congress. Even though they have been swept aside in the legislative process, these efforts have not been wasted.

History will credit Senator Glass with having stood against the storm when it was unpopular to do so.

Triumph Of Juggling.

Speaking at an Army Day dinner of the American Legion, Speaker Rainey said that today our public debt, less cash and securities, is $771,000,000 below what it was at the end of the Hoover administration. This conclusion will cause bonus-hunting veterans to wonder why the Administration worries about disbursing a few paltry billions when it ends by being better off than when it started to spend. Following Mr. Rainey's methods of computation, it would be possible for us to keep on spending beyond income forever, and see our debt diminishing while we do it.

In the first place Mr. Rainey treats all paper promises to pay as if they were as good as cash in hand. Then by deducting nearly $3,000,000,000 of profit obtained from revaluing the gold dollar, he reaches the "inevitable startling result" that the debt goes backward. Mr. Rainey is so pleased with his arithmetical magic that it would not be surprising if he were to find a way to wipe out the debt entirely. It could be done by a continuous devaluation of the dollar until the Government found itself obligated to pay a sum close to zero for each dollar of outstanding debt. The only difficulty about this method is that a point would soon be reached at which no dollars could be borrowed. Then we could turn to the printing presses, happy in the knowledge that the Government had no more debts to pay.

The Milk Problem.

From the beginning of its activities the dairy industry has been a many-sided obstacle for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The income of dairy farmers has been sharply cut. Milk producers complain that they are facing ruin because of the low prices they receive. Yet the public is unable to buy the available supply of milk because of high retail prices. Strikes arising out of this situation were frequent last summer. In attempting to bring order and prosperity out of this dilemma the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has encountered one of its most difficult tasks.

Market agreements sponsored by the AAA, and the purchase of dairy products for relief purposes, served to improve prices for a time. They did not bring about the basic adjustments which officials believe to be essential to the achievement of stability. Production still outruns consumption. In order to effect a balance the AAA proposed a 10 per cent curtailment of output for which farmers would be compensated through a processing tax on butterfat. But that idea has met with vehement resistance, and there are indications that it may be abandoned.

The milk curtailment plan is even less acceptable to the public than to dairymen. Thousands of homes are unable to buy the milk they need even while that product remains untaxed. Secretary Wallace recently pointed out that "the American people could possibly consume 50 per cent more milk than they are consuming," if they had sufficient income to buy it and a little more education in diet. "While in Philadelphia even skim milk was selling for high prices," he said, "in the surplus producing areas farmers were feeding milk to calves and chickens because they could not get enough money to pay for taking it all to market."

To reduce the cost of distributing milk is, of course, a very complicated undertaking. It does appear, however, that efforts toward that end would have a sounder basis than a tax on this most essential food for the purpose of reducing its supply. Curtailment of dairy products while undernourishment of children is extensive carries the theory of attaining prosperity by creating scarcity to extremes.

The dairymen who are so vigorously objecting to this plan do not seem to have any practicable alternative to offer. Some of them are urging the AAA to buy up surplus products for relief purposes or exportation at some future time. But Secretary Wallace has no intention of repeating the blunders of the old Farm Board. The case against the proposed milk tax would be much stronger if the dairy industry were making a concerted effort to narrow the broad gap between prices paid by the consumer and returns to the primary producer.

"Cracking Down."

Preparations are at last under way to apply the penal sections of the recovery act to code violators. Although action along such lines is necessary to prevent non-cooperators from enjoying unfair advantages, the success of the recovery program can never be assured by threats of punishment. If organized industries depend upon the Government to discipline recalcitrants, the courts will be swamped with complaints, as they were under the prohibition regime, and the enforcement system will ultimately collapse ignominiously.

Gen. Johnson evidently senses this danger, for he emphasizes the importance of bringing only "strong" cases into court and making all reasonable efforts to adjust differences without recourse to penalties. In other words, his enforcement drive is directed against flagrant and willful violators. If this discriminating method is followed, the number of prosecutions under the recovery act ought not to be very great.

Obviously, the work of policing thousands of organized industries is a task beyond the powers of Government officials. Industry itself must assume the chief responsibility for seeing that code rules and regulations are observed, with the Government and the courts merely lending a helping hand. Attempts to apply the penal sections of the act as a major enforcement device would not only overwhelm the prosecuting agencies of Government, but would destroy the principle of industrial self-regulation which gives vitality to the recovery plan.

Emphasis upon voluntary conformity is essential, therefore, not only to give effect to the codes but to provide safeguards against unreasonable restrictions which invite violations.

Insurance for Nation's Workers.

The accompanying article is the greater part of a statement delivered by request before the House Ways and Means Committee by Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co. Mr. Swope has long been an advocate of unemployment reserves, and in this statement explains his beliefs in detail.

UNEMPLOYMENT insurance, even at best, can only ameliorate the difficult conditions in which workers find themselves when unemployment comes. The first, basic, constructive thing to do, wherever possible, is to assure employment. Assurance is difficult, except where merchandise can be made up for stock which is not subject to rapid obsolescence or rapid changes in design and fashion. Such a case is the manufacture of incandescent lamps. In this department of the General Electric Co., for three years now, we have had employment assurance . . . During the three difficult years it has been in effect the employes who were given assurance of employment have received over $10,000,000 in wages. In this plan for 1934, the company guarantees at least 62 per cent of the normal maximum hours of work as provided under the code . . . If employes wish to have the benefits of this assurance, they are required to put aside 1 per cent of their earnings in a trust fund. If they leave the company, their savings are returned to them, with interest at 5 per cent; if they die, the accumulated fund goes to their families, and if they retire on pension it is added to their retirement allowance. In this three-pear period more than $107,000, including interest, has been accumulated for the employes.

Therefore, in cases where the employer guarantees at least 50 per cent of normal hours' work at normal wages, no payment into an unemployment fund is necessary. From the standpoint of the employe it is, of course, much better because he can look ahead with assurance to not less than 50 per cent employment in the coming year . . .

• • • •

ONLY one State, Wisconsin, has passed an unemployment insurance law and this law has not yet gone into effect. The Wisconsin law puts the burden of unemployment insurance entirely upon the employer to the extent of providing a fund of 2 per cent of the pay roll, with the funds kept separate for each employer in the State. The Ohio commission has recommended a law placing the burden one-third upon the employe and two-thirds upon the employer. Other State commissions have reported in different ways and some are still studying the problem. The diversity of opinion may mean some States will have no plan and others will have plans differing in many respects . . . making comparison of wage rates difficult and making competition unfair between employers in different States. Therefore, it would be desirable if Federal legislation can make the burdens upon employes and employers in the various States more uniform.

This is, however, a . . . complicated question and . . . therefore requires more study, especially from a national standpoint. . . . I suggest before the enactment of legislation . . . that your committee continue its study. . . .

The bill now before you proposes a tax of 5 per cent on the pay roll of any company, including in the pay roll all those receiving less than $3,000 per year. In the Wisconsin act, employes affected are those receiving less than $1,500 per year and there the tax is 2 per cent. . . . The Federal Government would assume no obligations for greater benefits to employes, or otherwise, for the income it thus receives.

Furthermore . . . it penalizes any company to the extent of 5 per cent of its pay roll, which voluntarily puts unemployment insurance into effect in a State where no unemployment insurance law exists, because there the company must pay the Federal tax in addition to the cost of its voluntary unemployment insurance.

• • • •

MINIMUM standards of benefits provided in this bill are very modest, in fact I think they are too low and are less than those provided in the Wisconsin act. It must be remembered if the minimum is set too low many States may comply with only the minimum while others will exceed such minimum, which again makes the burdens upon the employes and employers differ in various States.

The funds collected from each employer should be kept separate in each State, so as to encourage employers to reduce the irregularity of employment. . . If the funds are put into a pool, no more encouragement is given to those industries which are in position to do better than is given to industries where the difficulties of regularity of employment are much greater.

• • • •

I THINK that the soundest basis for unemployment insurance is contributory, so as to invoke the interest of the employes. Especially is this true in the administration of any plan and the disbursements of the benefits. The employes are in a much better position to be the distributing agents for the funds than either the employer or the State. The members of the administration committee for each company might be elected half by the employe and half by the management.

Emergencies . . . will arise where the needs will transcend the amount of funds that have been collected and then . . . the unemployment, if necessary, should be placed on the basis of need. Before relief or assistance is asked from the State or Federal Government, the employe not normally eligible for benefits in each particular organization, who are working half time or more, should contribute a small percentage (say 1 per cent) of such earnings to the fund, and the company for whom they are working should contribute an equal amount. . .

If a plan of contributions is adopted similar to that recommended by the Ohio Commission, of 1 per cent from the employe and 2 per cent from the employer, the Federal Government might participate in the following way: Each employer might deduct from his Federal income tax one-half the amount he has paid into the fund. The result of this would be that one-third of the burden would be carried by the employe, one-third by the employer and one-third by the Federal Government.

Letters to the Editor

D. C. Subways.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1931 I suggested to certain engineers subways for Washington, based, as I believe, upon a sound economic foundation: The cost of construction and maintenance to be borne by the United States Government, the District government, the traction company, the telephone company, the electric company and the gas company in proportion to service the subways rendered.

In short, the idea is as follows: Traction company to operate mass transportation in subways, bus, street cars or taxi; the District government to have water mains in a separate section and sewage system below. The Federal Government to have mail distribution system for Government buildings in subways via pneumatic tubes, the telephone company to have cables in subways and the electric company to have power and light lines located therein. The gas company, its trunk gas lines here.

In connection with this subway system, a tube should be built under the Potomac connecting with the air field on the Virginia side. Through this tube all bus transportation, either local or interstate, should enter or leave Washington. Mail should be transported from postoffice to air fields via pneumatic tubes.

The surface of Washington being built for the future, why not make it possible for the many visitors who come annually to our Capital to see the many beauties without getting lost in the traffic jams. There are many benefits to a system of this kind, which are apparent to all. JOHN C. HARRIS.

One Big, Happy Family.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United States of America has been called the "melting pot," but is it?

No matter where one goes one finds Irish-American, German-American and many other hyphenated American organizations. Is this the result of our failure to welcome foreigners, intent on becoming citizens, into our American organizations, or is it the determination of the alien to keep alive the comradeship, sociality and ideals of their fatherlands?

It may be trying to have aliens mix in with our friends in social gatherings because, unlike those native born, they seem satisfied to meet in a dance hall or club to drink, dance, sing and be merry. The problems of our Government, State or city, mean nothing to them as long as they are not interfered with in their lawful or lawless pursuits.

What is true of them is true of the American citizen; they say, let them (politicians) do as they please as long as I get mine. Today we hear condemnation and praise of our President, but are there any organized, country-wide associations of citizens getting behind the President and helping him over the tough, rutty roads? No! What America needs today in every town, city and State is an organized citizenry, meeting weekly, singing themselves into health and understanding; discussing local and National problems and joining once a year in National convention to tell our representatives in the Congress just what the people want them to do. A Kaiser Comeback?

Postoffice, Monday.

Poultney Bigelow, distinguished son of Lincoln's distinguished Ambassador to France, was a fellow student with the former Kaiser and is closer to him than any other American. Now Mr. Bigelow returns from a visit at Doorn and makes several surprising statements about Wilhelm—yet not a word of all the gossip concerning the imperial exile's plans for a return to his fatherland.

• • • • •

Guests who preceded Mr. Bigelow reported to this Column that, whereas timidity supplanted the old manner of the head of the Hohenzollerns toward the outside world, toward his own entourage he was more overbearing than ever. On the one hand, we were told, fear of a natural death enslaved him to his personal physician, while dread of assassination reinforced the walls of his estate with barriers of barbed wire. On the other hand, said these informants, he was forever scolding his five stepchildren and assiduously keeping alive that quarrel with his own offspring which was started by his second marriage.

Mr. Bigelow conveys a different impression. He indicates that the one-time War Lord has mellowed to the point of ripeness—that he hasn't a grudge, political or personal, in all the world—that he has acquired a vision wide and tolerant.

• • • •

Anyhow, we will wager this Column against any other—whatever you think of the odds—that small truth resides in the rumors of poverty tapping at the Doorn gateway. The former Kaiser's wife is rich in her own right. The German real estate remaining to her husband is assessed at $125,000,000. He has something like $10,000,000 in Dutch banks. And Holland is still on the gold standard.

• • • •

When Lloyd George's "Hang the Kaiser" propaganda was liveliest, during the Peace Conference, somebody asked former Ambassador Henry White, of the American Delegation, whether the treaty-makers would ever fulfill their threat of a trial at law for Wilhelm II.

Mr. White doubted it. He doubted a little whether the threateners were legally sound; he very much doubted whether they were emotionally sincere. International law being what it was, how could any court, then extant or to be specially created, have jurisdiction? Besides, there were still a few monarchs among the victor nations; such procedure as a trial would establish a precedent which might become uncomfortable. Nobody could be sure where it would stop.

"This 'Hang the Kaiser' talk," Mr. White concluded, "raises memories of the discussion of the mice about belling the cat."

• • • •

Well, most of us now know that Lloyd George's formula was a mere campaign slogan devised to influence a parliamentary campaign. But the former Kaiser himself seems never to have realized it.

• • • •

Nor do his chances for a restoration to even the Prussian throne impress his relatives. Their frame of mind is scarcely so forgiving toward Wilhelm as this new tolerance of his seems to make him toward them. It was not a great while ago that we talked about him to one of his cousins. Her name and title must, for obvious reasons, be withheld, but she was sufficiently prominent in the family to express its opinion, sufficiently old to weigh her words.

She said that the German Republic was no sooner declared than all the Hohenzollerns began to hope for a royalist revolution. But there was only one of them that hoped it would restore Wilhelm—and that was Wilhelm himself.

• • • •

Nothing, she thought, can convince the family that there won't be a restoration some day, yet all except the former Kaiser are certain that his unpopularity with the German people at large will prevent him from replacing the crown upon his own head. Moreover, the Crown Prince knows that he suffers with the people by being his father's son.

There have been opportunities for a son of the Crown Prince. But what always happens?

Whenever the time appears propitious—whenever the rest of the Hohenzollerns begin to talk about anything remotely resembling a coup d' etat in favor of one of those boys—Doorn hears of it. Doorn hears of it before some of their most trusted friends do. It is uncanny how Doorn hears of it. And Doorn spreads the news in the wrong quarters.

"Again and again, the Crown Princess Cecile, whom all the people liked so well, has come to me with tears in her eyes and said: 'That awful man in Holland has ruined everything. With him it must be Wilhelm II or nobody!'

• • • •

"Ah, well," our practical Princess sighed, "this king business"—she pronounced it in English, "kink pusiness"—"is not much of a business any more, and the Kaiser, he's fallen farther than he knows.

"What do we think of him? What can we? One of my nephews was with him when, at the war's end, they notified him he couldn't possibly remain on the throne. He turned white; his shoulders shook.

"'But,' he cried, 'if the people are against me, I can at least depend on my army!'

"And when they assured him he couldn't count on his army, he went whiter still, and his whole body shook."

At this point of her narrative, the good lady's English became very difficult, indeed. She drew herself up to her full height, which was no mean dimension; her indignation almost shouted the words:

"Und vot did he do? Vas he like the Czar? No! Wilhelm runned away like a t'ief und a coward instead of stayin' und dyin' like a kink und a man!"

Carlisle Bargeron

ON the question of whether the brain trust was plotting to overthrow the Government when Dr. Wirt was down here, I really don't know. There is one thing I can tell the doctor, though. I can tell him what they are doing now. There is no need for him to come down here to find that out, or for Congress to investigate.

They are writing, that's what they are doing.

And I don't see how they can possibly be doing any plotting. They can't possibly have the time. As a matter of plain fact, their literary output is so high that I don't see how they can be doing anything else.

BARGERON.

* * * *

At writing they are little busy bees, and frankly I think that must be what is meant when the human interest writers write the cheerful little articles about how the brain trust is burning the candle light.

We have currently at our disposal in the way of literature, Prof. Tugwell's new book, "Our Economic Society," and his syndicated articles. By Secretary Wallace we have the pamphlet, "America Must Choose," and so help me goodness he has gone in for syndicated articles, too. He is contributing a daily article on Religion and Statesmanship. I don't think he means the two are synonymous or have any relation whatsoever to each other. It is that the articles were simply advertised that way. I take it that he writes one day on religion and the next on statesmanship. The result is probably the reflection of the dual personality of the man, sort of a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde.

* * * *

Prof. Tugwell's new output didn't require the usual amount of labor that goes into the writing of a book. It was, instead, a rewrite of his former book, brought up to date for study in the high schools. Yet it required considerable work and I don't see how he could have been engaged in any serious plotting while doing it.

Come to think of it, though, this is not conclusive. There is the fact that Mr. Roosevelt while running the country during the most troublous days of its history found time to write his new book. "On Our Way," I believe it is called. How in the name of goodness he found the time to do that is more than I can understand, or why he wanted to.

Of course, the literary activities of Mrs. Roosevelt and Anna can be understood. They are not tied down to running the country. But Mr. Roosevelt, the professor, Secretary Wallace and the rest of them, how they manage to do it baffles my comprehension.

* * * *

Particularly do my fellow columnists, Messrs. Wallace and Tugwell, arouse my admiration. Why I have been known to put as much as three weeks of labor into one of my columns. The research attendant upon them requires a vast force of researchers and no end of researching time. On one occasion, a time when I wrote an opera, I thought I might have to go all the way to Russia to get the name of the dance which the Russians do when they squat and shuffle their feet and pitch knives into the floor. But I realized that my public couldn't wait until I had made a trip way over there and that also when I got back I might find my place taken by a Tugwell or a Wallace, so I just invented a term for it. I cite this merely to express my amazement at the ease with which Messrs. Wallace and Tugwell and the others turn out their stuff.

It defeats me, it does.

* * * *

Of course, these men are administrators and it may very well be that they have assigned the revolutionary plots, the turning under of the pigs, the planning, &c., to subordinates, leaving themselves free to devote their time to writing.

Or it maybe, and this is a good guess, that they have had all of this literary output prepared for several years and were just waiting until they came into power so they would have a sale for it. In this event they will sooner or later run out, and lose their public, too.

Parley Fails In Mill Strike

Cleveland Group Hold Fast in Deadlock Over Election.

Efforts of the National Labor Board to arbitrate the Cleveland worsted mills strike failed yesterday with the company and the United Textile oWrkers of America hopelessly at odds over a date for an election of employe representatives.

The board, after 11 hours of fruitless conferences Saturday, summoned spokesmen for both sides to meet yesterday, but the session ended with both the company and the union standing fast. Representatives of the union demand an immediate election of employe representatives under the supervision of the board.

The company has been equally adamant in its view that no election is necessary before August, when its present agreement with the employe representatives association expires.

The next step in the deadlock was uncertain.

Russian Sales Urged to Move Farm Surplus

Brookhart Asserts Soviet Pays Debts, Outwits Wall Street.

Soviet Russia would buy practically all American farm surpluses except wheat if extended credit, former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Administration agricultural adviser, declared yesterday.

With a sweeping flourish of his hands the Iowan confided:

"The Russians have settled money! They did it without the help of the Wall Street bunch, brain trusters or any other gangsters."

Unlike most other nations, he explained, the Soviet Union has a balanced budget. He fixed the favorable balance at 1,500,000,000 rubles. He stressed the Russian policy of setting aside for financing of international trade all of the gold in the country, including $90,000,000 worth mined last year.

Torgsin Stores.

"They headed off the Wall Street bunch completely," Brookhart added, "when they established what they call Torgsin stores, where better grade articles are sold for foreign money or gold only. Then if they owe a bill in the United States they send over their American money and pay Mr. Morgan nothing in foreign exchange. The Torgsin stores did a $90,000,000 business last year."

Brookhart ranked Russia's credit as "the best in the world except that of our own government."

He stated Soviet world imports from 1917 until July 1, last totaled $4,500,000,000.

Paid Every Bill.

"Of that vast sum," he reported, "Russia had paid for $3,700,000,000 worth of products. The remaining portion isn't due yet. She has paid every bill when due.

Americans have sold Russia $799,000,000 in goods since 1917, he recalled. He said this country received in exchange $609,000,000 in cash over a period of years, $172,000,000 in goods and later would get $18,000,000 as yet undue.

"One thing is certain; $500,000,000 or $600,000,000 worth of Russian purchases would start a lot of wheels turning in this country."

Two Killed as Rock Slide Hits 2 Autos

West Point, N. Y., April 8 (AP).—Two persons were killed and four others were injured when two automobiles were struck by a rock slide on Storm King highway today, two miles north of the U. S. Military reservation here.

An avalanche of rocks crashed against the vehicles after sliding about 1,000 feet, killing Mrs. Otto Seilheimer and her son, Otto, jr. Otto Seilheimer, sr., and a daughter, Geraldine, were injured slightly. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Shacknis, of Brooklyn, in the other car, also were injured.

Americans Plan 10,000-Mile Sail To Visit Sea King

New York, April 8 (AP).—A crew of young American yachtmen, including William Phillips, jr., son of the Undersecretary of State, will sail 10,000 miles this summer in a schooner to pay the respects of American seamen to an old Finnish sailor.

The aged man they will cross the Atlantic to visit is Capt. Gustaf Erikson, a sea cook who has become a sea king and who from the little port of Mariehamn, Finland, sends to sea the last fleet of windjammers left in the world.

The young Americans, most of whom are students at Harvard, say they wish to tell him they appreciate what he has done during the last 15 years to keep alive sailing ship tradition.

They will set out from Marblehead, Mass., in the two-masted Wander Bird, 99 feet long, an old German pilot boat, belonging to Warwick Tompkins, of Cambridge, Mass., and San Francisco. They will sail north of Scotland, cross the North Sea, and after navigating the narrow Skaggerak between Denmark and Sweden will turn northward into the Baltic.

A Dog's Life to Be Pretty Nice With Food Guarded by Code

Business of Feeding Pets Revealed as Extensive and Rich Trade.

Human beings can eat what they please as far as the National Recovery Administration is concerned, but dogs are going to get only the purest foods.

The food codes for dogs and people are in the making. The canine code, it was learned Saturday, will contain specific provisions about what shall not go into dog dinners. The other code will include no such purity clauses.

The meat-for-dogs situation already is codified, but the dog biscuit problem is pending. That is complicated, because some dog biscuit makers want to shroud the contents of their biscuits in mystery. However, Administrator Hugh S. Johnson hopes to sign the dog food code within a week.

Formulation of the codes for the dog food business is revealing some interesting facts about a little-known industry.

The canning of dog foods is a multimillion dollar enterprise, second, in fact, in the whole canning industry.

One major maker of food for dogs so far has used 3,000,000 pounds of whale meat. That has been a big help to the whaling fleet, now that whalebone and whale oil sales aren't what they used to be.

One would-be dog food maker wants the code to contain specific provisions for the use of reindeer meat. He has a lot of reindeer in Alaska. Bought 'em hoping reindeer steaks would make a hit in the American meat markets. They didn't.

If a Friend's Loan Is Unpaid Friendship Is Forfeited

By Robert Quillen

One of the most trying ordeals in the common experience of mankind is the business of saying "no" to a friend.

When a friend asks you for a favor, he places you under an obligation to grant it.

He would not ask it if he thought you would refuse. His request, therefore, is a compliment to your generosity. To deny it is to refute his good opinion.

But that is not all. By asking a favor he had placed himself at your mercy. His defenses are down. By speaking one word you can humiliate and shame him.

He knows that, yet he trusts you not to abuse your advantage. His self-respect is wagered on your chivalry.

But there is another side of the story.

Let us suppose that the favor he asks is the loan of your property—a vase, for instance, valuable and easily broken.

The act of borrowing pledges return of the thing borrowed. Though no word is spoken, the borrower says to you, "I shall return this as it was when I got it."

That is not a mere declaration of intention.

It is a statement of ability. It says, in effect, "If anything should happen to this property of yours, I am able to replace it."

That unspoken assertion must be part of the agreement, for certainly you would not lend willingly if your friend should say, "If this vase is broken, it will be your hard luck."

Now suppose the loan is made. Your friend departs with the vase and drops and breaks it on his own doorstep. And too late you discover that he is unable to replace it or pay you its value.

Now completely he has ruined himself. He has broken his word. He has confessed that he obtained your property under false pretense. He has shown himself unworthy of your friendship. And, worst of all, since he so lightly risked losing your friendship, he has shown how little he valued it.

To all of this you expose him by your weakling inability to say "no."

There is but one safe rule for borrowing: Borrow nothing you can not replace; borrow nothing whose value you can not afford to lose.

Priest Praises Exchange Bill, Urging Passage

oley, Pecora and Coughlin to Discuss Measure Next Sunday.

Detroit, April 8 (AP).—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, in an address today, described the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill as an attempt to clean out "the augetn stables of Wall street" and to limit the activities of "dressed up gangsters."

He announced thta next Sunday the bill, and other financial phases of the Roosevelt program, would be discussed by Prof. Raymond Moley, formerly one of President Roosevelt's monetary advisers; Ferdinand Pecora, chief counsel for the Senate Banking Committee in a number of sensational investigations, and himself. That broadcast will conclude his series for the season, Father Coughlin announced.

Uurgin enactment of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, he said that while "most of the brokers are honest" and "Wall street performs a necessary function," it is "sick and wants to cure itself."

"They claim the bill is inquitous," he said, "because it removes the lead from the dice. For 100 years Wal street has thrived on false reports. 'Let the buyers beware, has been its motto. The Government proposes to make the motto 'let the seller beware.'

Asserting that the ordinary man "has no more business playing the market than he has shooting craps with loaded dice," he said that Wall street has reversed the baseball rule of "three strikes and four balls" to make it "four strikes and three balls, and plays with a cock-eyed umpire."

He defended the marginal requirements of the pending bill and said the Government would be "reasonable," fixing the margins "not low enough to attract the suckers," and not high enough to interfere with normal business of the stock exchange.

Missed by Bullet, McElroy Warned Life Still in Peril

Kansas City, April 8 (AP).—City manager H. F. McElroy, into whose home a bullet was fired Saturday night, was warned today "We never miss the second time."

His daughter, Miss Mary Mcelroy, who was kidnaped last year and held until her father ransomed her for $30,000, heard the threat voiced over the telephone and reported it to McElroy.

"Are you Mary McElroy?" A man asked when she answered the telephone.

Given an affirmative answer, the man voiced his threat, then hung up.

Police guarded the McElroy residence until daylight. While McElroy and his daughter were conversing in a sunparlor, a bullet entered through the window of the living room, struck a table in the dining room, and fell to the floor.

Recently, McElroy received a note demanding money.

Cuban Government Faces Crisis Today

Havana, Cuba, April 8 (U.P.).—The government crisis precipitated by the suicide of the secretary of justice is expected to reach a climax tomorrow. Several cabinet members are expected to resign at tomorrow's meeting.

The health of President Carlos Mendieta has improved sufficiently to allow him to preside. He suffered a severe shock when Col. Roberto Mendez Penate killed himself last Wednesday, presumably because of discords withing the Union Nationalista.

The Week Abroad

By Andre Vulliet.

Three little states bordering the chill Baltic Sea, all of them together a trifle smaller than Missouri, have just signed nonaggression pacts with a huge neighbor, a neighbor even bigger than the United States; in fact, the greatest single area in the world under one flag. The little states are Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Their combined population is only 5,300,000 souls. Their vast, sprawling neighbor is Russia with a population almost 32 times as great. Naturally, an agreement of such pious forbearance on the part of such ill-matched neighbors has thrown the spotlight of history on that corner of the world this week.

These pacts, signed in Moscow, to run until 1945, are really only the extension of similar five-year treaties signed three and a half years ago. To a certain extent, they duplicate the general pact of nonaggression signed in London last July by Russia and all her neighbors, which, of course, included the Baltic states.

Read literally, they would seem almost meaningless, indeed, laughable, because of the colossal disparity between the signatories. One of them could simply gobble the three others as an appetizer, pact or no pact.

Yet the action is perhaps significant in that it confirms the character of the now definite foreign policy of Soviet Russia. Inviting other nations to join, which is a hint to Germany, the Soviets hope, by this indirect move, to have the integrity of the Baltic states guaranteed, thus firmly establishing buffer states between them and such Western nations as still seek Eastward expansion. Russia, long held a menace to the peace of Europe, seems now to have developed an obsession to be let alone behind a great wall of pacts on her European frontiers. She has plenty of troubles at home. Abroad she has to keep an eye on Japan.

When the pacts were signed, Litvinoff, Russia's foreign commissar, said this:

"Chauvinism, nationalism and racial prejudice are foreign to the Soviet state which does not push its ambition in conquests of widening of its territories and does not see that a nation's honor lies in educating its people in a spirit of militarism and a thirst for blood."

France, regarded by some political writers as likely to wage a preventive war, now is also very much concerned with her own problems. Tension was such when Premier Doumergue took office last February that he pledged himself to clear the Stavisky affair and give his country a sound, financial position. His future and therefore, as many believe, the very fate of the democratic regime as it now stands, depends on his ability to carry through his promise.

So far, little progress, if any, has been made in the Stavisky scandal. Last week brought a bloodless duel between a deputy and a Royalist and the arrest of two alleged murderers of Judge Prince. They had to be released because of insufficient evidence. The public at large, intensely stirred when the scandal broke out, now wants arrests and punishments commensurate with its outraged emotions. Until it gets them, or until a revival of business permits him to face life in a rosier mood, there will be acute restiveness.

To revive business, Premier Doumergue has embarked upon a "common sense recovery plan," a most drastic deflation program based on the idea that if the government puts its own finance in order, business will follow. Since, according to Finance Minister Germain Martin, government extravagance is only possible through confiscatory taxation which, in the long run, means socialism, the French government must put an end to it and "respect the principles which govern the personal budgets of every citizen."

Therefore, government expenditures will be brought down to income by some $270,000,000 through such measures as discharging approximately 85,000 public employes, reducing their salaries from 5 to 20 per cent, cutting pensions, civil and military, from 15 to 25 per cent and eliminating double jobs and subsidies.

Such a policy should be watched closely; it is in direct opposition to that which is followed in this country. If it succeeds, it will be a powerful argument for the anti-inflationists. If it does not, it may mean the death of the Doumergue cabinet and possibly devaluation of the franc.

* * * *

Meanwhile Great Britain, which devalued her currency and refrained from government extravagance, can boast of a remarkable financial record.

Last week she announced the floating of a £150,000,000 3 per cent funding loan 1959-69 issued at 98 to repay £105,000,000 of 4 per cent treasury bonds. She could obtain funds for 25 years for a net yield of 3.08 per cent, thus doing better than the United States which, a few days ago, had to pay 3.25 per cent for a ten-year loan.

At the same time, Great Britain, with legitimate pride, could flash the news across the world that her budget showed a surplus of £31,148,000. According to the official American view, this was due to the fact that the war debts had not been paid. In the British press, all the credit went to the English taxpayer who for many years has paid and paid and paid. All the papers suggested that a sixpence reduction on the income tax would be welcome, but none of them, except the Morning Post, mentioned the war debts.

It seems reasonably certain, however, that the giant 73,000-ton Cunarder 534, on which work was resumed last week, will not be used as Senator McKellar suggested "to send the whole amount by mail."

Douglas W. McGregor, of Houston, newly appointed Federal district attorney for the southern district of Texas, is only 31 years old.

This year's freshman football squad at the University of Missouri ranks higher scholatically than any similar group in several years.

At Sulphur Springs, Ark., in the Ozark country, craftsmen who had lost their jobs in factories organized a guild to sell their handiwork.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

"LET others do the work," said Beau Brummel once, and E. V. Lucas puts it as the motto of "Post-Bag Diversions" (Harper, $2.75), a collection of delightful quips and quiddities he has received in letters from all kinds and conditions of men.

But, I dare say, not even his correspondents would have called it work. They just wrote what came into their heads. Mr. Lucas, one of the most charming of essayists and anthologists, merely added a note at the end of each excerpt.

So on one page we have T. E. Shaw (Lawrence of Arabia) setting down: "Please don't class me as a person who wantonly writes books! I would like to be able to write, and the Arabian campaign gave me a good excuse for trying to; but the complete failure of that book as a piece of literature has left me no ground for further efforts. I very much hope to avoid trying again!" Adds E. V. L.: "But since then T. E. Shaw has translated 'The Odyssey,' 1932."

THEO. HALL

And on the next page Oliver Herford writes that he is half in bed with a carbuncle, "making visits in the daytime to have tea or lunch with Peg—a sort of ticket-of-leave man." To which E. V. L. remarks: "Peg is Mrs. Herford, whom her observant husband once described as having 'a whim of iron.'"

* * * *

If I quoted as much as I should like, this column would have to run over onto the next page. I never saw a pudding so full of plums. Maurice Baring tapped out letters on an old typewriter at the front in 1918. One began:

Dear E., if you want to keep well,
You shouldn't drink Hock or Moselle,
It gives you a foretaste of Hell;
If you want to keep frisky,
Drink brandy (not whisky),
And Claret and Cliquot as well.

Dion Clayton Calthrop wrote: "Do you know that Punch's voice is a copy of that first Punch, the waiter from Accera outside Naples, and is the only human voice handed down the ages?"

Sir Gilbert Parker blew up with indignation after reading "Lady Chatterley's Lover." E. V. L.'s old schoolmaster wrote him a letter full of praise and pride—that was the Rev. A. T. Gill, the father of Eric Gill, sculptor and designer. Hugh Walpole jocularly proposed that E. V. L.'s next book be dedicated to him. So Lucas took a dozen very mixed books from the review table in the Punch office, wrote flowery dedications for them, had them printed and inserted with artfulness, and sent them to Walpole. Christopher Morley, about to meet E. V. L. for the first time, drew up a document full of "whereases" and "wherefores," which stated that a New York station magazine conner should be their rendezvous, that they should recognize each other by dallying with an Atlantic Monthly, and that if the magazine had to be bought the later comer must pay for it.

A banquet invitation had gone to John Galsworthy. He wrote back: "Please let me do as little as possible on my hind legs. What a curse are dinners where you can't get drunk in peace and with impunity."

Max Beerbohm, requested to compose a preface for a book of H. M. Buteman's drawings, replied that he would be superfluous. "Good Buteman needs no bush."

Joseph Conrad sent a note of recommendation for his friend Norman Douglas. "I encouraged him to write—as I told you before—when we got acquainted in Capri. His MS. is jolly good."

A. Edward Newton contributed this anecdote: "A Frenchman asked another Frenchman how his sons were getting on. 'Fine,' was the reply. 'My first son is a diplomat and my second son is also a lunatic; my third son is a banker and my fourth son is also in jail; my fifth son got the Croix de Guerre and my sixth son did not go to the war either.'"

Other letters came from Kipling, Barrie, G. B. S., Arnold Bennett, Stephen Leacock, Edgar Wallace and a Total Stranger, who asked E. V. L. to pick him out a sitting room and bedroom, "on gravel or sandy soil essential."

* * * *

You won't find a better book for bed-table browsing. Easy, informal, mildly antiquarian or gently humorous, the letters give us little peeks at a hundred engaging personalities. Not least is E. V. L. himself, interested in everything, from Charles Lamb to cricket, whose fame is secure in 80 volumes of essays, stories, travelogues, biography and anthology, as well as the name of two Paris restaurants, a variety of rose and a new sweet-pea.

To him one feels like saying as Galsworthy ended a letter: "Well, good luck to you, and many more books."

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

"Henry Esmond."

While Dickens' hisorical romance, "A Tale of Two Cities," is certainly not one of his best works, it is my belief that the historical romance by his contemporary, Thackeray, is that author's masterpiece. I like it better than "Vanity Fair" or "Pendennis," and enormously better than "The Newcomes," which I think is one of the most terrible bores ever perpetrated by a man of genius.

Thackeray wrote "Henry Esmond" in a few months; he was at the height of his powers, and his mind and heart were full of the subject. The manuscript shows very few corrections—not nearly so many as in the other books. Unlike all his other long novels, it did not appear in monthly issues, but was published in 1852 as a single complete work. This was the result of a deliberate decision, for Thackeray said Esmond was "much too grave and sad" to come out as a serial. The melancholy of the story seems to have given the author unnecessary trouble, for it is certainly not a depressing book. Edward Fitzgerald in May, 1852, wrote, "Thackeray I saw for ten minutes; he was just in the agony of finishing a novel which has arisen out of the reading necessary for his lectures, and relates to those times . . . of Queen Anne. He will get 1,000 pounds for it."

Certain scenes in this book are indeed memorable. The first meeting of the boy with his fair mistress; the howling mob about the wheels of the coach; the evening when Henry brought the smallpox to Castlewood; the duel in Leicester Field; the descent of the staircase by Beatrix; the breaking of the swords in the presence of the Pretender.

The beauty of the mother is marvellously described, and the scene where her jealousy of young Henry gives her away is dramatic in the extreme. There are many readers who are sorry that Henry married her, but I think he was lucky.

New Pay Scale Mines Ignore

Southern Operators Order Work Resumed at Lower Wages.

Birmingham, Ala., April 8 (AP).—Whether 15,000 miners would answer the call tomorrow to return to the mines opening under an injunction against the NRA was a matter of speculation as preparations were complete to resume operations.

Spokesmen for the United Mine Workers of America were en route to Washington today as were Alabama commercial coal operators, for the hearing tomorrow on the controverted amendment to the bituminous coal code which wiped out wage differentials between Northern and Southern fields.

Operators decided to reopen tomorrow under the protection of a 10-day injunction granted by Federal officials from enforcing the amendment to the coal code, pending a hearing on a permanent injunction April 16.

Under the order, operators planned to reopen with the basic minimum wage for inside workers of $3.40 per day in force, instead of $4.50 ordered effective as of March 31, by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. The 60-odd mines were shut down Friday, operators holding the new scale exorbitant.

Queen Astrid Awaits Coming of New Baby

Brussels, April 8 (U.P.).—Queen Astrid was confined to her room in the royal palace tonight, preparatory to the birth of another child, expected within a month.

The young queen, whose husband, King Leopold, ascended to the throne recently after the tragic death of his father, the late king Albert, was reported in excellent health and spirits.

Communists Prolonging Strike, Is Claim.

Haverhill, Mass., April 8 (AP).—More than 1,000 Haverhill citizens, in mass meeting today, organized a vigilance committee for the avowed purpose of combatting outside communistic interference in local labor troubles.

Approximately 6,000 shoe workers, affiliated with the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union, tomorrow will enter the sixth week of a strike precipitated by inability of manufacturers and workers to agree on a new working contract.

Leading local citizens have charged that Communist agitators have several times heretofore succeeded in interrupting negotiations.

The shoe strokers are scheduled to begin balloting tomorrow morning on the question of accepting a compromise agreement.

U. S., State Officers Seek Bandits in Southwest.

Oklahoma City, April 8 (AP).—Federal and Oklahoma officers searched today for Clyde Barrow, kidnaping gunman, and were watching for an automobile which they believed might belong to John Dillinger, escaped Indiana desperado.

A general warning was broadcast by the Departmetn of Justice last night that Dillinger might be in the Southwest.

The hunt for Barrow continued in he belief he might have circled back toward the Cookson or Ozarke Hills.

Radio Waves and Ripples

LEANING tensely over the "rim" of their "copy desk" 20 years ago today, half a dozen copy readers worked furiously to make the edition. Story after story leaped into the basket as news poured over the wires.

"Dr. Mary Walker Urges Pants for Women" . . . "Daniels Orders Grape Juice Navy" . . . "White House Correspondents Form New Association" . . . "Artists Convene as Corcoran Gallery Opens" . . . "Mexican Gunboats Shell Tampico" . . . "201 Are Entombed as Explosion Terrifies Eccles, W. Va."

These are typical stories that made the front page during the static weeks of April, 1914. Tonight you will hear them thrillingly re-enacted with authentic dramatizations by a brilliant cast of radio actors during the "Headlines of Yesterday" broadcast, sponsored by The Washington Post. Continuity was written from The Post's own pages.

Set your dial at WMAL at 8 p. m. and hear Dr. Mary Walker pat a little chap on the head for not touching tobacco. Hear how Cabinet members came to ride in luxurious cars and the White House Correspondents Association was formed.

WHETHER you hear it in a small town opera house or in a palace lined with plush, Bizet's Toreador Song from "Carmen" should send chils up your esthetic spine.

It's one of the more explosive bursts of triumph and love to be found in opera. There's been hot Spanish jealousy between Escamillo and Don Jose and daggers are in the air. This reminds us of a famous incident that occurred during a "Carmen" presentation in New York.

Carmen had just been pierced with Don Jose's dagger. She threw her arms up and did one of those impassioned death leaps landing well up stage. But she hadn't measured her distance or timed the fall quite right. Falling with her feet toward the audience, her voluminous hoop skirt held high by its wire lining formed a circle of red silk.

Even dowager dames in the "Golden Horseshoe" tittered as a rustle of comment waved over the elegant parquet.

But Don Jose, always a hero, came to the rescue. With a gallant gesture he pounced down with his dagger and pinned Carmen's skirt to the stage . . . thereby saving not only the day but the prima donna's blood pressure.

Lawrence Tibbett, opera's playboy and the man with the barrel chest, will pour his thrilling baritone into the Toreador Song tonight at 8:30 over WRC. His other selections will be the currently popular "Wagon Wheels" and a number to which he alone does real justice "Glory Road."

FOLLOWING a deluge of fan mail, WOL's versatile Northern Dramatic Co. has decided to have a try at Shakespeare. Members of the company are working now, perfecting gestures and gathering pillow cases to be used as Roman togas in "Julius Caesar."

Later they plan to give that tear jerker . . . Dicken's "A Tale of Two Cities." This is the one where Lucy Manette braves bloody revolutionists and bleak blasts to watch outside her father's window in the Bastille. The most glorious sacrifice in all literature is that of Sidney Carton . . . scapegoat of the piece, who goes to the guillotine to save Lucy's lover.

Adapatations for both pieces are being made by John Shellie, Robert Dorsey and Director Ronald Dawson.

Rosa Ponselle sings "fireside favorites" tonight at 9 o'clock over WJSV as the guest of Andre Kostelanetz's orchestra. In addition to "Comin' Through the Rye" and "Home Sweet Home," she will present two arias from her operatic repertoire—"Addio del Passato," from Verdi's "La Traviata," and "Les Tringles de Sistres," from Act II of Bizet's "Carmen."

Although charges and counter charges in the air-mail episode have been shouted through the halls of Congress, whispered about in corridors and written about until editors found gray hairs overnight, Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont Republican, will tell what he knows about it tonight at 8:30 p. m. over WMAL. His subject: "The Current Chapter of the Air-Mail Tragedy."

A new series of music appreciation broadcasts begin today over WRC at 9:45 a. m., sponsored by the the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, with the Repertoire Club offering a Chopin program.

Gertrude Lyons is president of the Federation. LaSalle Spier, Thelma Callahan and Helen Lyon are directing the recitals.

As the "Headlines of Yesterday" go on the air tonight at 8 o'clock from WMAL, Banks Murray, jr., and Phyllis Warner, talented juvenile actors, shown above with Margaret Frawley (extreme left), will be members of the company. They will assist in recreating the Eccles, W. Va., mine explosion—an important news event of 20 years ago—part of The Washington Post's thrilling regular Monday night series.

Advice on How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Progressive Myopia.

Nearsightedness is known to physicians as myopia. In this condition the eyeball is too long and images of objects are focused in front of the retina rather than on it. This condition always causes some degree of inefficiency in some direction even when the best of glasses are worn and in the best possible manner. However, persons with ordinary shortsightedness usually wear glasses and, in addition, they train themselves for life work in which their shortcomings of vision are not much of a handicap.

There is a form of myopia that presents a more difficult problem. It is usually known as progressive myopia although there are those who call it malignant myopia. This article deals with that.

The eyeballs of babies are always too short except where the stage is set for progressive myopia. Farsightedness in infancy and childhood is the normal condition. The period of most rapid growth of the eyeball, in the after-birth period, is the first six years of life. The ball not only grows rapidly in this period, but it changes in shape. At six years of age a child's eyeball should have about the shape that is regarded as normal in after years; the child should be neither nearsighted nor farsighted.

In progressive myopia the eyeball is apt to be too long at birth, for the condition is likely to be both congenital and inherited. The parent is not apt to notice anything out of the ordinary until the child is 2 years of age. In the second year of life the parent may notice that the child sees distant objects poorly; when looking at a near object is liable to turn the head and look with one eye only, or to turn the eyes from side to side habitually. An examination with a retinoscope, made by a physician, may reveal the trouble. Such children need to begin wearing glasses before 3 years of age.

As a rule, nearsightedness escapes detection during at least the first six years of life. Eye tests made on entering the first grade often disclose the trouble. After this age eye trouble gets worse until about age 25, after which it progresses more slowly, though in most cases it never ceases to grow worse yearly.

The period in which the downward progress is most rapid, as a rule, is that between 10 and 14 years of age, the years in which school work is apt to be hardest. In consequence, in the olden days, many children with progressive myopia were compelled to drop out of school and a personality inversion and inferiority complex sometimes resulted.

Under present-day conditions most children with progressive myopia are permitted to remain in school but they are required to wear glasses that fit and to have them set right on the nose all the time. They are given school seats where the light is just right and they are spared all tasks that throw undue strain on the eyes. In many cases they are taught in special sight conservation classes.

The progressive myopia eyeball is structurally a poor one. Its dense layers are poor in tensile strength and they overstretch easily. The ball is subject to hemorrhages, to detachments of the retina, and to tears in more than one location. But, says Dr. A. L. Brown, if the condition is recognized and proper care is given and proper routine followed, fully 90 per cent of such cases remain unprogressive, retain vision, and lead happy and useful lives.

12 Tax Evaders Anxious to Settle With U. S.

About a dozen persons wish to give either the Treasury or the Justice Departments between $300,000 and $400,000, to settle tax delinquency cases against them, the Associated Press reported.

At the Justice Department it was indicated none of the offers came from prominent people whose cases already have been presented to grand juries, but several of the individuals had found their incomes being scrutinized by Federal agents.

Bal Masque At Embassy Is Brilliant

Three Bachelor Italian Secretaries Hosts At Party.

Younger Social Set, In Costumes, Share Fun With Elders.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"Now it can be told"—the real story of the bal masque given Saturday evening at the Italian Embassy by the three bachelor secretaries, Signor Bartholomo Migone, Signor Giuseppe Tomassi and Signor Andreal Ferrero. It was, of course, the most brilliant ball of the season, and the fact that it had been anticipated for many weeks did not lessen the enthusiasm of those invited. The three young hosts will go down in the annals of Capital history not only as diplomatic geniuses, but as master hosts and entertainers.

The Italian Embassy, as every body who has been there knows, is one of the most beautiful in town, and Saturday evening the softness of the old woodwork and rich furnishings were enhanced by the varied costumes of the several hundred guests.

The ball began shortly after 11 o'clock following numerous dinner parties, and the Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, though not officially a host, was there and smiling as, garbed in an academic gown, he greeted the guests, while the young hosts busied themselves in the giving of so lovely a party.

Everybody was in costume. In fact, without a mask and a costume, even the most important guest would have been turned away. In the dining room, before the flower-decked buffets, the guests gathered in crowds to chat, and to play a guessing game as new members joined the groups. Many kept their masks on until after 2 o'clock, but by that time the identity of almost every gladiator, toreador, Hamlet and Louis XIV had been guessed. The three hosts wore the native dress of the peasants of Sardegna, fashioned of soft felt, one in red, another in yellow, and a third in blue. They wore grotesque masks with fat, pink cheeks and round noses.

Spanish Embassy Group Arrives.

A group which included members of the Spanish Embassy staff and several others arrived at about 11:30 o'clock and entered the ballroom doing a gay Spanish dance. The men wore white mess jackets with wide red sashes and ties, and the ladies of the group represented, in costume, various provinces of Spain. Although the Ambassador and Mme. de Cardenas came with this group, the latter wore a handsome Japanese costume with a magnificently dressed wig, which she got when in Japan several years ago. The famous Argentine painter, Senor Don Cesaro Bernaldo de Quires, painter of Gauchos, looked for all the world like a figure from one of his own portraits, and carried out the character of his costume until late in the evening.

To describe the gaiety and brilliancy of the ball is almost impossible, but the favors which were passed to all the guests were most charming. For the ladies there were toy dogs, Scotties and wire-haired terriers, and for the men, hand-beaten ash trays of pewter, while tiny mementos of the occasion were whole zoos of small, jointed, wooden animals, which for months will be reminders of the party.

Mrs. Curtiss Dall, daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, was among the most popular young women. She made a charming picture in her pale blue satin hoop skirts, and dainty lace fischu trimmed with bunches of violets. The Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, so soon to leave Washington, were a center of regretful groups of friends. Mme. de Lima wore a costume from her native Mexico, while the Ambassador wore a handsome blue domino.

Others seen at the embassy wearing unusual costumes were Mrs John Caswell, jr., gowned in black with a small heart-shaped cap of organdy, as Mary Queen of Scots, and Mr. Caswell, as a Roman legionnaire; Miss Deborah Dows, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Beatrice Phillips and Miss Anne Eustis were gowned alike as angels in cloth of gold with green and gold wings and golden halos. The most striking of all was the tall, handsome Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, wife of Senator Barbour, costumed as an Indian chief in white leather beautifully embroidered with white and red beads. Completing the costume was the gorgeous chieftain's headdress of white plumes with the ends tipped with red. Mr. Chauncey Parker, jr., was dressed in khaki, with the long flowing hair and beard, carrying a heavy walking stick, with a knapsack over his shoulder, representing a well-known figure on the streets of Washington.

Mme. Sbernadori Dressed as Lenci Doll.

Also Mme. Sbernadori, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, represented the well-known Lenci dolls, of Italy, wearing a crisp dress of white organdy with orange and black felt strips forming large squares on the skirt.

Miss Nancy Newbold went as the famous movie star, Greta Garbo, in sport clothes which she wears when not working on the sets. Miss Helen Wardman and Miss Alicia Rodgers were cunning as little blonde twins with dolls in their arms, and Mrs. Harold Sims, costumed as Mickey Mouse, kept every one guessing for a long time as to whom she might be. Miss Katherine Wilkins was dressed in a handsomely embroidered Russian dancer's costume, with the short skirt, elaborate headdress and red leather boots.

Miss Olivia Stokes also wore the Russian style of dress, but of a different type as she chose that of a lady of the Imperial Court, a heavily embroidered sapphire-blue velvet gown edged with sable and a handsome Russian headdress studded with jewels. Mrs. Claire Booth Brokaw, of New York, an outstanding blonde beauty, went as Mimi, of "La Boheme," in French blue edged with tiny ruffles of black tulle, with a black bonnet trimmed with ostrich feathers, and a satin ribbon tied under her chin.

Men's Costumes Also Brilliant.

The men of the party were not outdone by the ladies in costumes for many were equally as handsome, among them were the former Third Secretary of the Germany Embassy, Mr. Alex Wutheneau, as Charles V in black velvet; Lieut. Frederic Coleman as a musketeer in deep purple, with the three-quarter flowing cape from the shoulders and the broad-brimmed satin hat with plums; Mr. I. N. Phelps Stokes, made a perfect Arabian in his black and white stripped burnous; and Baron Paul Schell appeared as Harpo Marx. Many of the men dressed in the costume of the Tyrolian people, and among them were the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, Mr. Fred Nano; the Third Secretary of the German Embassy, Herr Gustav Struve; the Third Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. H. W. A. Freese-Pennefather, and Mr. John Newbold. The members of the French Embassy were attractively dressed, the men as gardners, and the ladies as flowers of the garden. Mr. Wollcot Waggaman was a Hindu soldier of the British Army, in the British khaki uniform and the turban; Mr. Munroe Mayhoff, of New York, was costumed as a Maharaja, in yellow and gold brocade, the turban having a large jeweled piece in front holding black aigrettes.

Others who displayed originality were Mrs. Frederica McKenney Mallan, who went as an Arabian Knight; Lieut. Richard M. Cutts and Dorothea Lane, who went as Raggedy Anne and Andy; the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Mr. Joao Ruy Barbosa, who went as the well-known Pierrot.

Mrs. Kent Legare wore a very handsome and striking Venetian gown of shining gold made with a panel in the front of white lace. A tiny gold tricornered hat with matching lace as a veil, completed the costume; Miss Nella Veverka wore the native costume of Czechoslovakia, Miss Cinthia Davis wore a native Hungarian costume, Miss Barbara Wright went as a Russian peasant.

Modern Business Woman Needs Confidante to Prevent Breakdown, Says Psychiatrist

Less Beauty Than Brains, Says Author of Cleopatra

Gaston Delayen in "Cleopatra" Admits She Was Easy On the Eyes, But Maintains that Essentially She Was a Great Politician.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE NAME OF CLEOPATRA conjures up a variety of conflicting pictures ranging from that of a scantily clad creature of greasy complexion and greasy morals, to that of a siren whose come-hither look served at once to change the boundaries of the ancient world and destroy the formula of her fascination.

What, then, was the chief charm of this famous siren whose death still weaves a spell around her name? Will the secret of her enchantment ever be revealed?

Any new answer to these age-old questions are always avidly devoured, particularly by women, who are prone to attribute Cleopatra's success to her physical attractiveness.

New Interpretation.

One of the latest attempts to give a new interpretation of the seductive Egyptian has been made by Gaston Delayen, whose book "Cleopatra" presents the famous queen as a siren by instinct who, nevertheless, was a great politician.

M. Delayen, however, does not refute the idea that Cleopatra was easy on the eyes. He admits her charm was enhanced by her slender figure, her "orbs of limpid splendor," and her clear-cut features. He further points out that her aquiline nose and slightly pronounced chin were in accord with the beauty charts of the day.

Delayen admits she was physically attractive, but he stresses the idea that she made more use of her brains than her beauty. He portrays her as employing her charm and intelligence as a weapon of statecraft, as using love merely as a means but finding that means extremely pleasant.

He presents her also as, primarily, a queen who was eager to safeguard her kingdom against Rome, and even to create an Eastern Empire capable of rivaling that of the West. In order to bring about the latter, she realized she needed help from some powerful Roman ruler. Accordingly, she set out deliberately to further her policy by making use of her charm.

Her thoughts turned first toward Pompey, whose support she attempted to gain by becoming the mistress of his son. Some historians believe that in this affair she actually lost her heart for the only time in her life, but even if this were the case, she was interested—above all—in preserving her throne, in saving her kingdom from being destroyed by Rome.

Later, when dethroned by political schemers, she heard Julius Caesar, world conqueror, was at CLEOPATRA was ambitious and brainy. Her looks were secondary. A new book says so.

Alexandria. Determined to appeal to him, she rolled herself in a strip of rare Persian carpet and had herself carried before Caesar as a gift.

When the carpet was unrolled, she stood before him and presented her plea, with the result that Caesar proclaimed her Queen of Egypt and fell so completely under her spell she would doubtless have become ruler of the world but for his untimely death.

After Caesar's death, his empire was divided and Antony, on receiving the eastern part, notified Cleopatra to meet him at Tarsus and acknowledge his sovereignty over her domain. But Cleopatra knew her power and her Roman. Attired as Aphrodite she floated down the Cydnus in a flower-canopied barge to meet Antony. He capitulated, of course, and except for one slight digression remained her lover for 14 years.

She had little chance to become a world ruler by being allied with the inconsequential Antony, even if they had not incurred the hate of Octavius Caesar. Finally, the death of Antony shattered her last dream of hegemoney. Rather than to suffer the shame of capture by Octavius, she put the asp to her breast.

Delayen points out that by this final gesture this resourceful woman, whose beauty was supported by brains, proved herself as courageous in her dying as in her living. For he believes, above all, that the love Cleopatra inspired proved that she was a great ruler whose failure centered in no weakness of her own, but in the dictates of fate.

The book is translated from the French by Farrell Symons and is published by E. P. Dutton and Co. The sale price is $3.75.

Colorful Shoes Blossoming Out; Blue Overdone

Black Being Shelved; Red Becomes Popular for Sandals.

New York, April 8 (AP).—Shoes this spring and summer will be gayer and more colorful than for many seasons.

Everything but black seems to be the idea of the shoe designers. Women who are tired of "the same old thing" can give their black shoes a rest and blossom out in bright red, blue and green footwear.

Blue is very popular—almost too popular. Every second spring suit one sees on Fifth avenue is blue, and windows of shoe stores are full of blue footwear in everything from sports sandals to the most formal of kid pumps.

It is whispered, however, that blue shoes are in danger of becoming a fad, but even so, quantities of blue shoes will be observed for some months to come.

The darker browns, in combination with linen and spring colors, are gradually replacing blue with those who set shoe styles.

For sandals and sports shoes, bright red continues popular.

An amusing idea in summer sports shoes comes from the Tyrol, where peasants wear shoes of machine-made lace with toe caps of colored leather. Add a heel, and you have a perfect resort shoe for the dog days.

White will be outstanding for summer and extremely popular for day wear.

It also will be evident in evening shoes. A white evening slipper being shown has a high spike heel, colored buckle, and graceful, slender colored trimming bands in bright green, red or sapphire.

A spectator sport shoe in white is an oxford with a walking heel and a colored vamp, with wide silk laces of the same shade.

The new high front for shoes appears even in evening slippers. One of these is adorned with a clip and has the clip, quarter, and back, and the high heel in a contrasting shade.

Tariff Head to Speak To Women Democrats

Fewer Children Public Charges, Government Bureau Reports

The number of dependent and neglected children cared for in institutions decreased in 1933, according to a bulletin released today by the Children's Bureau.

The bulletin is based on reports from 276 child-caring agencies in 38 cities. These reports show that the number of children under care in institutions in 1933 was 11 per cent lower than in 1929.

The reports showed that the number of children cared for in foster homes remained virtually stationary in 1933 after having risen each year since 1929.

Discussing the decrease of children in institutions, Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau, said one of the chief contributing factors was that Federal funds available for home relief had resulted in fewer homes being broken up because of poverty.

However, Miss Abbott also pointed out that decreased contributions to child-caring agencies and smaller incomes from endowment funds had caused these agencies to reduce their intake of dependent children. She said that in some localities children who had been removed from their homes because of neglect or cruelty now had been returned home because no money was available for their support elsewhere.

"This means," she said, "that future problems in the care of children will be greater."

The POST Parade

Two We Salute.

THEIR GRAY COATS splashed with the be-ribboned gold of many medals, their broad-brimmed black felt hats touched with the same red and gold braid as capped their erectly held shoulders, two grand old men from the South were honored in the Army parade Friday.

• • • •

White-haired, with keen eyes—blue in one instance and twinkling brown in the other—under the ambush of snowy eyebrows, this pair of octogenarians eagerly relived the days of their 'teens. Days crammed with exciting and dangerous experiences, living through the serious game of war nearly three-quarters of a century ago. Both of them held commanding positions over groups of men when they were the age immortalized by Tarkington—17.

• • • •

Yet they discuss any present-day subject keenly, and with a background not only by deep thought but thought tempered by living experience. They both think that wars today are not what they were in Civil War days and that the United States would do well to leave martial participation to other nations and mind her own knitting.

Ladies and gentelmen—I give you, with special salute—General Homer Atkinson, Commander in Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, and Gen. William McK. Evans, Commander of the Department of Virginia in the same organization.

Kate's Pianist Here.

THE YOUNG MAN who probably has played "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain" more times than any other single individual within the past few years, is come to Washington to make his home.

He is the Spaniard, Augustine Borguno, just down from New York on the conclusion of Kate Smith's contract with the concern which sponsored the feature for which that song was "signature."

• • • •

For three years Senor Borguno played not only all the lovable Washington singer's accompaniments, but also made all necessary "arrangements" of songs for her to sing. He is primarily a pianist with much talent. He also is a thorough musician.

Most of all, he is a composer of some fine music. His most original work perhaps, is a ballet score entitled "The Damask Rose." It has an Avery Hopwood touch in its boudoir setting, much comedy both in music and pantomime, and an especially lilting score.

• • • •

Senor Borguno played it last night at Sophocles Papas' studio. At another party recently, after a program of classic piano music, an admiring guest blandly requested that he play "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

Senor Borguno's sense of humor saved him. He played it.

All Professors Lie, Pedagogue Admits

London, Ontario, April 8 (U.P.).—Undergraduates at the University of Western Ontario were puzzled today over a charge by Prof. N. C. Hart, head of the department of botany, that students are suckers and professors liars.

Hart told his class that every professor told from 8 to 18 "downright lies" per lecture.

"The trouble with most students," he said, "is that they take in everything told them, not excluding lectures. For instance, every professor tells from 8 to 18 downright lies per lecture, and you take them all in like suckers."

Navajo Women Boss of the Wigwam

Expert on Indian Customs Says Their Word Is Final.

They Keep Busy Making Blankets and Weaving Rugs.

WHITE WOMEN insist on their rights and fight for independence. Navajo women are such complete bosses in the wigwam they don't have to worry about emancipation.

They head their clans, which are established on the mother's side, and hold the strings of the family purse because the Navajo wealth is in sheep, which are handed down from mother to daughter.

This is divulged by Wick Miller, who has given much time and study to Indian arts and customs, and who recently conducted an exhibit here of Navajo, Pueblo, and Hopi Indian craftsmen at work.

"Navajo women don't argue about equal rights," he said. "And they don't insist on deferential gestures; they know their word is final, their position is enviable."

One of the Navajo weavers, Eekh-pah (Coming Again Woman), substantiated this idea. "I don't argue about my rights," she said. "I don't even think about them, and neither does any other Navajo woman."

Dressed in deer-skin moccasins and a gayly colored skirt topped by a dark velveteen blouse, Eekh-pah fingered her turquoise-set bracelets and talked quietly about the customs of her people.

"Our women keep busy," she explained, "with making blankets and rugs. We get the wool from our sheep, comb and card it, and then spin it on that." She pointed to a distaff, a remnant of the ancient type of spinning wheel.

She further explained that the wool is dyed after it is spun and then woven into rugs and blankets on a loom.

Eekh-pah speaks English as well as a white woman for she went away to school. Returning to her tribe, she married a young brave who already had a wife and baby.

"I didn't want to marry him. I didn't love," she confessed. "But my people pursuaded me to marry him. Now, I no longer live with him; I am divorced."

Divorce among the Navajos consists in separation without benefit of a court decree. Marriage, also, often takes place without a ceremony. The common procedure is for the Navajo maiden and her lover to begin living under the same shelter, thereby announcing to the clan they are married. Occasionally, after the first child is born, they have a marriage ceremony.

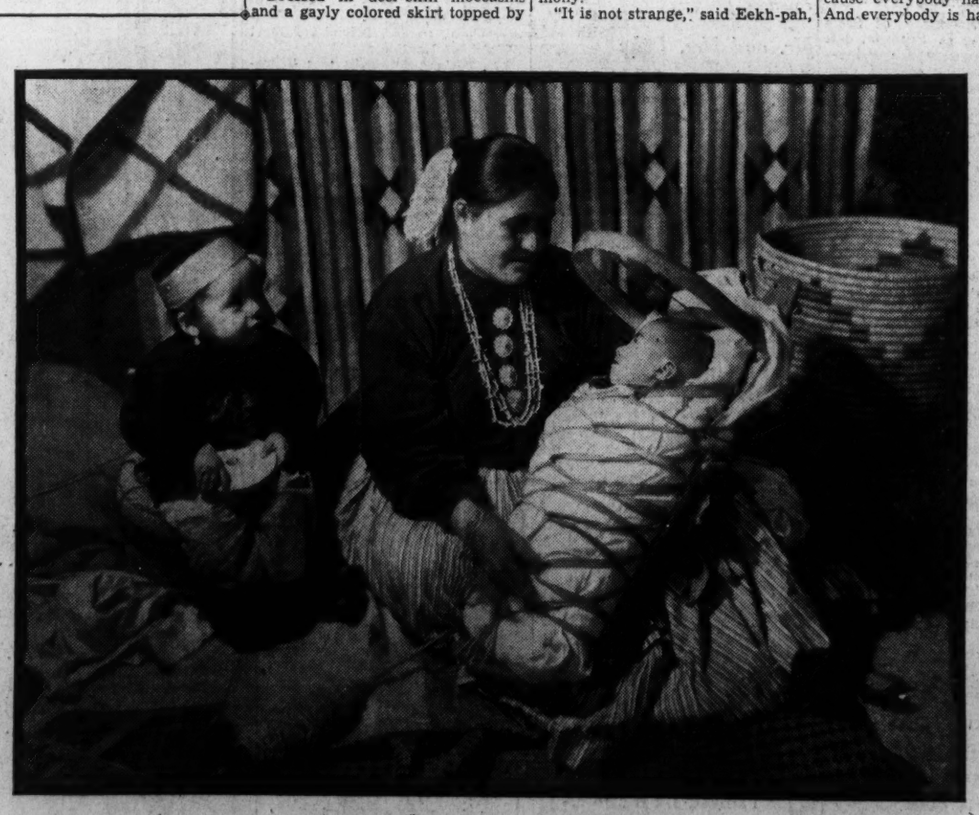
"It is not strange," said Eekh-pah, "for a Navajo man to have more than one wife at the same time. But the woman never has two husbands unless one is dead or unless she has a divorce."

It is also not unusual for a brave to be married to several sisters of the same family at the same time, according to Mr. Miller.

"That state of affairs is not objectionable to the Navajos," he said. "But they are extremely careful not to marry within their own clan. All in all, I would say their standards are higher than ours, and I believe they live up to their ideals, as a whole," better than white people.

Eekh-pah and her sister, Clinco-pah (Departing Woman) represent the largest single trible of Indians in the United States. As the Navajos lead a wandering existence, their dwellings are temporary shelters.

"Wherever the Navajo is, he must be busy," said Eekh-pah. "I shall be glad to get back to my clan because everybody has plenty to do. And everybody is happy."



SHE IS BOSS of her wigwam and controls the family purse strings. What more could a feminist ask? Meet Clinco-pah—"Departing Woman" to you—of the Navajo Tribe, who has been in Washington with her children.

Telling Troubles Saves Nerves And Mental Health, Is Opinion

Physician at St. Elizabeth's Attributes Increase in Mental Cases Among Women Due to Complex Modern Life and Lack of Family Understanding.

SOME ONE TO TELL her troubles to before she reaches the "going to pieces" stage. That is what the modern business or professional woman needs to save wear and tear on her nervous system. So believes Dr. Mary O'Malley, psychiatrist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, whose practice for 35 years has been concentrated upon every nervous and mental disease known to women.

The endlessness of uncompleted tasks and the constant demands under pressure—these are some of the worries that need an outlet. Frequent relaxation and the cultivation of richer spiritual lives, are other suggestions Dr. O'Malley gives for mental health and balance among women careerists.

Approaching the border-line of a nervous and emotional collapse is often not serious, says the psychiatrist. But crossing the boundary is something quite different. Once "over," the woman regresses down the mental scale to childhood. The road back is difficult—sometimes impossible.

What Are Causes?

What has caused the increase of mental cases among women during the past few years? The swift tempo and rapidly evolving complexities of modern life is one cause, according to Dr. O'Malley. General increase in population is another.

"But environment," she says, "plays an astonishingly important part in the development of the mentally sick—more so than was formerly realized. Lack of understanding in the home, and the unsympathetic attitude of hardier associates often aggravate mild ailments into serious conditions.

"With a changed environment, we are able to accomplish results here at the hospital. And to follow up our work, we now educate the patient's family to cooperate."

A pioneer among women psychiatrists, Dr. O'Malley began specializing in mental diseases over 35 years ago. Following her graduation from the University of Buffalo Medical School in 1897, she served a general internship in medicine at the Sisters of Charity Hospital there.

Passing a civil service examination for psychiatrists, she was appointed woman physician at Bingham State Hospital in 1898, where she served for seven years. Her work there was absorbing and her accomplishments, noteworthy.

In those days, St. Elizabeth's had only men physicians on its staff. With the appointment of Dr. William A. White, of Binghamton as superintendent of the Federal institution, this conditon changed. He insisted a woman physican be placed in the women's department.

Upon Dr. White's recommendation, Dr. O'Malley was selected to fill the post. Other appointments of women followed. Now the entire women's department staff is comprised of women physicians.

Feminine Viewpoint Valuable.

"That seems a logical arrangement," reasoned the kindly, motherly looking Dr. O'Malley in an interview yesterday. "Maternal instinct, patience and the feminine viewpoint should fit women physicians for the peculiar task of analyzing the mental illnesses of their own sex. Understanding the subtle, underlying causes which often shatter even the normal nervous system, they understand their patients."

Often the care of the children, which proves the crucial "last straw" in some mental cases, becomes the link that connects women again with the world of reality, according to the psychiatrist.

Returning to the "maternal instinct" in women physicians, Dr. O'Malley declared it was this quality which best fitted them to cope with the childlike attitude common to the majority of women mental patients.

"Most of them are children,' she said, "of different mental ages, and have to be treated as such. Developed to physical adulthood, something happens in their lives. They find they can no longer cope with the problems that confront them. They drop down the mental scale to a more comfortable level.

"Their families often worry them by insisting they continue to measure up to full mental stature. The strain aggravates the case.

"Here at the hospital, we understand their levels. We remove the worry and stress from their lives. We treat them as normal human beings and appeal to them upon their level of comfortable comprehension. That is the first step in bringing them back."

Patients Love Her.

It is all the easier to understand Dr. O'Malley's philosophy when one sees her among her patients at St. Elizabeth's. Making her rounds through the department, she is surrounded at every turn by her "children."

They anticipate her appearances eagerly. Her name is almost a caress on some lips, as patient after patient pours out burdens in her ear. To them, indeed, she is a mother who can untangle all the knots in their existence.

While the number of patients in hospitals for the mentally sick has substantially increased during the past 35 years, Dr. O'Malley points out that the changed attitude of those on the outside is making it easier to effect recovery.

"In the old days," she said, "the average lay person had the wrong attitude toward those with mental disorders. Many patients were kept at home under adverse conditions, until their cases reached the incurable stage. Today, through education, the attitude is more humane and complete cures are on the increase."

Standing uniquely as the only woman clinical director for mental diseases in the United States, author of many scientific treatises and head of several medical, neurological and pathological organizations throughout the country, Dr. O'Malley is not, as she modestly believes, outshone by her two distinguished brothers. They are Edward O'Malley, former State attorney general, and James O'Malley, both judges on the New York supreme bench.

Lipstick Is Top Item on Budget For Cosmetics

Survey Shows Woman Also Spend Much for Perfume.

New York, April 8 (AP).—Women in making themselves beautiful pay more per purchase for lipstick and perfume than any other cosmetic, it was shown in a survey covering 15 major cities and 1,500 women.

Three-fourths of the women said they paid $1 or more for lipstick. For perfume, 41 per cent paid 76 cents to $1, and others paid up to $25 a bottle.

As for bath salts, deodorants, mascara, skin tonics, hair tonics and depilatories—"none of these products is used by as many as half of its possible purchasers. Many of the women do not even know what some of these products are."

Department stores were found to be the most popular points for purchase, with nearly 60 per cent of the women voting that way. Drug stores were second with 26 per cent.

About 57 per cent of the women were found not to use bath salts, and the word "deodorant" appeared confused in the women's minds with "depilatory."

"The confusion • • • was clearly evident in the voting," the survey showed, "proving you can't be too simple in your terminology with the public, or too careful about explaining, in your advertising, the exact function of your product."

Among the 1,500 women, only 7 were found who did not use face powder, 6 used custom-blended powder, and many liked plain talcum. But nearly 70 per cent of the women do not use mascara.

Plenty of women used skin tonic, and 113 brands were mentioned in the survey. Cleansing tissues were used by 90 per cent of the women, and two brands led the field, "a striking case of utter dominance • • •."

Depilatories are "still in their stone age so far as marketing progress is concerned—88 per cent of the women do not use them."

Cities where the survey was made include Hartford, Conn.; Providence, R. I.; New York; Washington, D. C.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Richmond, Va; St. Paul, Minn.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Albany, N. Y., and Worcester, Mass.

Same Old Story.

By Katherine Smith.

Don't ever tell a woman that
Her heart and mind are plain—
As utterly transparent as
A polished window-pane.

She'd rather be a mystery,
(As if she ever could!)
And yet, sometimes she'll sob and say,
"I wish you understood."

Fish Yarns in Encyclopedia, Museum Expert Discovers

New York, April 8 (U.P.).—Ichthyologist E. W. Gudger, fish expert of the American Museum of Natural History, today started a new fishing season off right by doubting enormous catches reported in the Encyclopedia Brittanica and other hefty reference works.

He declared some of the weightiest and most revered books of fact spin "tall yarns" the nimblest-minded angler might profit by. He suggested a few of these for "preparatory study" in exaggeration.

Among those he mentioned was the Cambridge Natural History statement that huso have been caught weighing 2,760 and 3,200 pounds, a report in the Encyclopedia Brittanica that the hausen (huso huso) "attains the enormous length of 24 feet and a weight of 2,000 pounds, and stories of 30-foot fish in the Standard Natural History.

He said these stories conflict with known facts and figures, and all would have shrunk with application of the tape line and scales—"like many tales you may hear this season."

Special Shoes Help to Avoid 'Shopper's Foot'

Extra-Comfortable Durable Footwear Sells Now for Low Price.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HEARTACHES HAVE the reputation of being among the worst of human ills. But ask the footsore shopper which she'd rather have—two aching feet, or one aching heart!

There might be excuse for the one, most lovelorn specialists agree there is, but there is none for the other. Feet now are guaranteed protection by shoes designed to support. A large store has just received a supply of these safeguarders, the best things yet for bearing the brunt of hard concrete and still retaining their shape and shine.

These real shopping shoes are made of crushed pigskin leather, known for its wearing quality. It takes bumps and scuffs with never a sign to show for them.

Such shoes are not only smart—they're comfortable. Not only durable, but conservatively priced. It's a day of cheering now we can buy them for as low as $5. In this new lot there are several different designs, straps, and oxfords, both stitched and perforated. All of them have comfortable walking heels. They're available in blue, black, brown, and taupe.

A Piece of World Fair.

A bit of the Century of Progress Exhibition has reached Washington. The interesting Swiss Home Industry display which many Washington visitors saw there last summer will be opened by Dr. Marc Peter, United States Minister from Switzerland, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Hand woven linens, toys, beautifully wrought pottery and jewelry, samples of woodcarving, embroidered blouses and children's dresses will be shown, and most exciting of all, they're going to be for sale.

Besides these, several rare home products borrowed from the Berne and Zurich museums from the exhibition of the past summer, will be on display.

• • • •

Monogramed Crystal.

A special offer on glasses is making a stir in the shopping world. It should. Three kinds of glasses, the tall highball, the small highball and the cocktail glass, each one engraved with three cut initials in diagram fashion—sell, monogram and all, for 35 cents each.

The buyer promoting the offer admits that seldom in the world of selling do three such crystal glasses go for such a sum—and never, up to date, with monogram included.

Rejuvenating Your Ancestors.

Hanging in many Washington homes are old oil paintings sadly covered over with the accumulated dust of years, with their under lying sheen completely hidden.

Under this thick coating grandfathers and great uncles are hardly distinguishable.

Complete and thorough rubbing for these paintings often costs so much owners allow them to stay as they are.

A local chemist interested himself in this problem, and after much experimentation, and many consultations with artists, concocted a cream which incorporates many cleaning essentials. When rubbed over the pictures dust and consequent dullness disappear as though by magic and the painting "comes to life."

He says he has found a great many people clean their pictures with soap and water—which apparently does the work nicely at the time, but later causes them to crack badly. His cream, he declares, is definite proof against this tragedy.

• • • •

Very Staunch.

A cement, good for replacing the handle of a pitcher for restoring a doll's head, is one of the interesting items carried by a local shop.

Odd pieces of china, glassware, wooden or metal pieces which aren't worth taking to the mender, offer excellent experimental material. The cement is easy to apply, and once on is immovable.

• • • •

Miracle Worker.

There came a letter the other day asking if it was really (all kidding aside) possible to make eyelashes grow longer. Consultation with the lady in charge of a local beauty salon which sells the products of an internationally known beauty authority threw light on the subject. She said a year ago she had almost no eyelashes. Today they are her pride and joy.

All that's needed is an eyelash brush, a little jar of a certain eyelash grower, and consistent treatments. It should be applied to the lashes every morning and night, and can also be used on the eyelids to give them a moist, groomed look.

Fragrance in Decanters.

Eau de cologne in decanter bottles makes a double temptation to buy. The cologne comes in two delightful fragrances—gardenia and sweet pea.

When it is used up, there's still the decorative decanter which will do for wine as well as it did for eau de cologne.

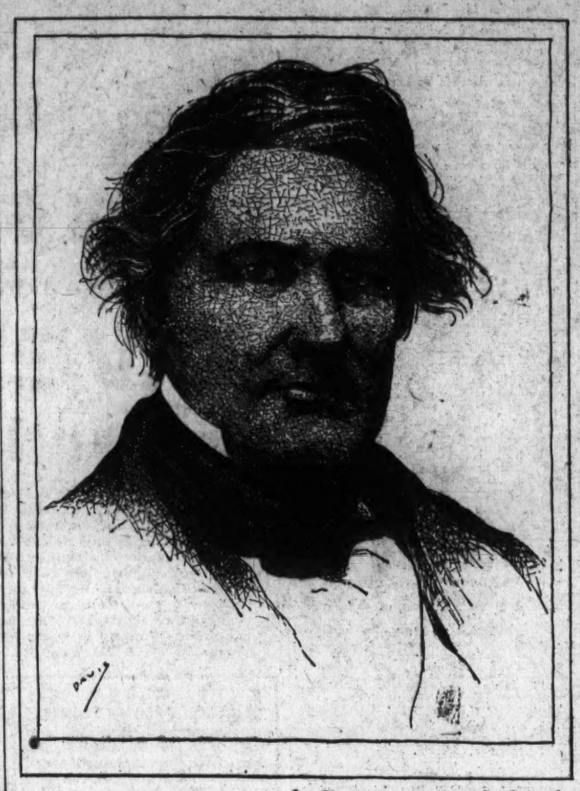
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Millard Fillmore—Abigail Powers



She was a young school teacher and he was a tailor's apprentice when they met and were drawn together by a mutual thirst for information and education. Their upswing to the White House was swift, their tenancy there a happy one, though Abigail was already in failing health. Her chief joy was in selecting and arranging the library granted them by Congress.

This Couple One of Handsomest Ever in The White House.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

It is a far cry from Abigail Fillmore to Eleanor Roosevelt, but both were school teachers before their White House experiences; both devoted adherents of higher education for women. It was due to Mrs. Fillmore's love of good literature that the first library was installed in the Executive Mansion, an innovation that has brought many happy hours to its subsequent occupants.

Mrs. Fillmore was one of the handsomest women ever to be mistress of the White House. Her pink and white complexion endured until her death and an early commentator on men and events in the National Capital once declared she was "of surpassing fairness."

It was a happy coincidence that Millard Fillmore, frequently called "the handsomest of the Presidents," was comely in appearance also. He was more than 6 feet in height, of commanding figure and manner.

The romance of those two handsome people had an intellectual background; they became interested in one another through their mutual love of study and books.

In common with many other distinguished women of her era, Abigail Powers was a "child of the manse," the daughter of a prominent Baptist clergyman who lived at Stillwater, Saratoga County, N. Y., where Abigail was born in March of 1798.

New England Family.

Dr. Powers and his wife were of Massachusetts lineage and brought their sturdy New England virtues with them to middle New York.

The little girl had begun her education when a heavy blow fell upon the manse. Dr. Powers died and Mrs. Powers was left with the support and care of several children upon her hands.

The widow, with the dauntless spirit of the pioneer, did not hesitate to take on this task. She joined an expedition of friends and relatives moving to western New York to Cayuga County and there set out new home stakes in what was then a frontier settlement. Abigail thrived on the diet of plain living. She seized eagerly every chance for an education, and before she was fifteen was teaching a country school during the summer months to pay for her own tuition in the winter time. This was in Sempronius, New York, and they still talk there of the teacher who afterwards became First Lady of the Land.

It was when she was 20 years old she met at the Cayuga County school a tall, broad shouldered good looking boy of 19, a wool carder's apprentice who, like herself, spent every leisure moment in acquiring an education. His name was Millard Fillmore and he came of a good but poverty stricken New York family; his educational advantages had been few and far between.

Millard Fillmore had his eyes on the law profession but his father thought he should be content if he became a good tailor. In obedience to his father's wishes young Fillmore became a clothier's apprentice but he did not give up his cherished ambition for law.

Three Year Separation.

In Abigail Powers he found sympathy for his views and assistance in his aims. Side by side they studied and Millard progressed rapidly under the impetus of love and a mutual interest. An opening came for him in Erie County and they were parted for a time. The separation lasted for three years; because of his poverty he was unable to travel the distance of 150 miles to see her.

The post, however, bridged some of the distance and they kept up a steady flow of correspondence. Finally after eight years' acquaintance they were married at the home of Abigail's brother, Judge Powers, in Moravia. Abigail continued teaching to aid the family purse, until they moved to Buffalo in 1830 and Millard was able to support his family. There he began the rapid climb to fame which was to place him in the White House.

The first step was the Vice Presidency of the United States when Zachary Taylor was the Chief executive. The death of Taylor placed Fillmore in the Presidency, and when the word came to the pretty little Buffalo home Mrs. Fillmore, although in failing health, knew her duty lay in Washington.

The recent death of a sister kept her from entering at once the social round of the Capital. She left many social tasks to her young daughter, Mary Abigail Fillmore, who was just out of college and enjoyed her new role.

After a time the social schedule got under way, with regular receptions on Tuesdays and levees on Friday nights from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Fillmore made it a rule to be present at these formal functions, but her greatest joy in the White House, outside of her family, was in arranging the books purchased from the $5,000 appropriated by Congress for the President's library. The selection of this collection was left entirely to Mrs. Fillmore's judgment.

As she worked with her new literary treasures her thoughts must have strayed to the meager library Millard and she had so prized in their early married life. They were few in number, poorly bound, but how they had cherished the atlas, geography, Bible, psalter, dictionary and scattered volumes of poetry and prose. Now with the largesse of Congress she could revel in Hawthorne's new books, "The Scarlet Letter" and "The Great Stone Face," and the brilliant essays of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Then came the days when Fillmore fought valiantly to save the Union without bloodshed. In Abigail's sitting room was his surest counsel, and he turned to her with his political problems even as he had brought his scholastic ones to her long ago.

Just Survived Administration.

Abigail Fillmore was destined not to return home. She survived her husband's administration and was strong enough to attend the inaugural services at the Capitol for his successor, Franklin Pierce, and to welcome Mrs. Pierce to the Executive Mansion. Then she retired with her family to the New Willard Hotel where she died three weeks later.

When they buried Mrs. Fillmore at Forest Lawn in Buffalo on April 2, 1853, a friend wrote of her:

Yet there were places in her heart
Where love could rest and friendship live.
There was a light within her soul
Which earth could neither take nor give.
And there were accents for her ear,
More winning than the note of fame,
Where household voices softly breathed
The sweetness of a mother's name.

It was the epitome of the life of this distinguished woman whose name is writ in letters of gold on the White House Hall of Fame.

Furniture of Elizabethan Period Massive and Intricately Carved

This, the story of English furniture of the Elizabethan period, is the first in a series of articles on the story of period furniture which will appear on this page every Monday.

By Jo Ellen Maxon.

DARK, RICH TAPESTRIES, heavily carved oak furniture and massive stone fireplaces characterized houses of the Elizabethan period.

These interiors mark the beginning of inteerst in home decoration in England, before most of the design and decoration was expended on churches. Gradually, however, the taste for comfort and luxuries crept into the homes.

Wall Paneling.

The walls during this period were paneled in oak carved in various designs. Large bow windows made up of tiny panes of leaded glass, called mullionned windows, extended from floor to ceiling. Sometimes heraldic emblems and coats of arms were painted on the window panes in deep jewel colors, blues, reds and emerald green, giving a soft glow to the sunlight as it streamed into the dim, cavernous rooms.

The immense fireplaces were of carved stone or wood with great hearths extending out into the rooms.

The furniture, chiefly of carved oak, was massive. It is distinguished by the soft, mellow tones of the wood, and its bold, handsome construction.

The pieces of furniture were few in number. The long, narrow refectory tables have heavy, bulbous legs. The other most generally used pieces were court cupboards, chests, beds, benches and chairs. The beds were of colossal size with richly carved posts and headboards, and curtained during the winter months in exquisite damasks and brocades.

The chairs were all heavily constructed of wood, with very few upholstered pieces.

Stamped leathers, painting, armor and gleaming bits of brass and pewter brought brightness into the rather somber settings.

Illustrated is a typical Elizabethan court cupboard with a pierced front secton where bread was kept for the poor.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If April 9 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 11:30 p. m. to 12:30 p. m.

This day will prove far more propitious for indoor than out-of-door social activities. You possibly will have to exercise restraint to keep from very freely telling some one just what your opinion is regarding them, as they have a decidedly irritating effect. Diplomacy, however, if exercised, will certainly prove the better part of discretion and ward off any hard feelings, so it will be wisdom to use it.

The woman born on April 9, as a rule, craves change of scene continuously, and suffers from ennui if compelled to live in the same environment any great length of time. You will find life much simpler and happier if you aljust yourself to conditions and learn to control your restlessness. Possessing a very sympathetic disposition, social welfare or educational work offer unlimited fields of activity. It might be wise not to assume a supercilious poise regarding sentimentality.

The child born on April 9 should, as it grows up, be taught to assert itself, and not allow older children to dictate what it should or should not do. Having an obliging and easy-going nature, it must learn not to let others impose on it.

She will lay in a supply of staples, too, so the pantry shelf will be some inspiration.

Under this system she will waste little valuable time deciding what to serve, and the serving itself will be less of a strain.

Here are three good house-cleaning menus:

BACHELOR-of ARTS

By John Erskine

The Story So Far.

Alec Hamilton, Columbia freshman, likes college for two reasons, the Phi Phi Phi's and Mimi. The latter is just beginning at Barnard when her father is wiped out, financially. Instead of going home, she gets a job as cashier in a drug store. Alec assures her that the morning after initiation he will bring her a ring and the next day he will get a part-time job and marry her. But the night after initiation he goes off on his first bat. He is bowled over and forgets his date. When he realizes that he has thrown down a lady he is covered with shame, especially as he hasn't enough money left even to buy the promised ring. With this experience he begins to grow up.

Meanwhile the dean has gotten on his trail. Discovering that Alec is falling down in his studies, he warns him that if he doesn't improve he'll be sent home in disgrace.

"There's that speech on Conciliation," continued Tom vaguely.

"Burke," said the president. "Here, that's enough!"

"Make it ten," insisted Alec.

"It's your turn," said the president.

"The Anatomy of Melancholy."

The president laughed. "There you are! I don't know what this is all about, but I gravely suspect you!"

To get rid of them sooner he unlocked the door which lets you out on the stairway.

"Come again."

"We expect," said Alec, "to be back in a minute.

Twelve minutes, to be precise, and the assistant secretary held them up for another 5, before he got the president's consent. Once more the electric elevator moved them up slowly. The president was standing behind his desk with his hands in his pockets, plainly annoyed.

"What's it now?"

Alec laid down on the president's desk as though he were dealing cards, nine library slips, all marked "Out." He then turned to Tom and relieved him of something he was carrying under his arm. It was a ponderous edition of "The Anatomy of Melancholy." The two boys grinned in triumph.

"You see, sir? That's just about the chance we have of getting a book. Would you like to suggest another list, to make sure?"

The president began pushing an electric button on his desk, so hard that Alec feared the machine might break.

Sit in Silence.

They sat in silence. The president had the receiver to his ear. Suddenly he thrust his head forward and his eyes glared. "What! The librarian is out! Oh, he's at a committee, is he? Well, I wish to see him at his earliest convenience!"

The president put up the telephone. "I'll look into this! If you have any more trouble, let me know."

This time he sent them down in the elevator.

"Good-by."

The intellectual exercise involved in meeting the great man had cleared their heads slightly.

"He didn't invite us to come again," remarked Tom. "Say, they'll murder you at that library desk! You'll need a bodyguard if you ever try for another book."

"This one," said Alec, "will last us quite a while. I wonder what it's about!"

They were in the final stage of their hangover, their souls still united by what was left of the artificially stimulated beatitude. Deciding to investigate the book together, they repaired to Alec's room in John Jay, where they spread it out on the bed and turned the massive pages. With youth's instinct for such things they got directly at the scandalous passages, and Tom began to read without skipping, but Alec grew thoughtful. This chapter was about the causes of love melancholy, and further on there was another part about how to cure it. The fellow who wrote that book thought people would want to cure themselves of being in love! He would always love Mimi. Why, that girl was in his thoughts every moment of the day—

Then he became quite sober. She had not been in his thoughts every moment! He had been drinking with Tom and Jim at the Gold Rail—he had been spending the morning with the president in the library. He had forgotten Mimi! All this time she was waiting for him! Had he not witnessed this infidelity with his own eyes he never would have believed it!

Tom was greatly surprised to see his new fraternity mate stretch out on the bed and begin to sob.

"What the devil! What's happended to you?" He put his arm over the limp shoulders and tried to turn Alec's head, to see his face.

"I'm a wash-out, damn it! I don't deserve her. God, Tom! We were drunk!"

"Well" said Tom, philosophically "that's happened before."

"It won't happen again to me," said Alec. "I'll go to her now and apologize, and if she won't forgive me, I'll kill myself."

These extreme ideals were too much for Tom. "If she drops you just for being lit at your own initiation, you're darned lucky not to marry her! I didn't know she was a prig."

"This morning," said Alec sadly, "all this morning, she's been waiting there at that cashier's desk earning her living, compelled to be polite to gazooks like Woolsey—waiting for me to bring her an engagement ring. I promised! And where was I meanwhile? I was bandying words with the president and making myself responsible for this monstrosity with its rotten leather binding which is coming off on the bed spread. I'm a wash-out!"

Tom got up and stretched. "We'll explain it to her when we go over for lunch. I'm hungry now."

Alec put his arms on Tom's shoulder. "See here, old man, I'm going alone!"

Tom was hurt. "Ain't we brothers?"

"Not in this. I'm going alone!"

Chapter III.

It was a bitter disappointment to Alec that he couldn't yet marry Mimi. He took her to the Clermont for a grand dinner and explained why he couldn't, and to his surprise he discovered that she hadn't expected him to—not yet. He did not mention the engagement ring, nor did she.

When he went home for Christmas he missed her.

One day, half through the month, he waited in the drug store till a group of customers had paid their checks. Then he leaned over and whispered confidentially:

"I've written again to the old man for a raise in my allowance. I told him how much I owe, but I could string it out from month to month if he'd send me a little more."

"O. K.!" said Alec, setting his hat more firmly on his head, "I thought you'd like to know, but I'll be going along!"

"I just gave him the total."

Her interest revived. "How much was it?"

"Three hundred and fifty-two dollars and ninety-four cents.

"Alec! You couldn't owe so much!"

"Not a cent more nor less!"

"How awful! Alec, I don't believe it."

He pulled a wrinkled paper from his pocket. "Here it is—you're not the only person who can keep books! I know it's right—I added it up twice."

She smoothed out the paper.

Laundry	$37.19
To Tom, for loan	35.00
Tailor	55.00
Food for Mimi	18.50
Tip to waiter	1.50
Taxi to get her there	.50
Tip to taxi	.15
To Jim, for loan	20.00
Poker	105.00
To Tom, for loan	.10
Fraternity house	90.00
Total	$352.94

Mimi glanced up sharply. "What's that about food for me?"

"Oh, that's the dinner at the Clermont, the night I told you I couldn't marry just yet."

"You shouldn't have spent so much!"

"Well, it helped to cheer us up!"

"But I saw you pay for it!"

"I borrowed $20 from Jim."

Her eyes flashed. "Was he trying to break up our engagement?"

Alec flushed slightly. "Don't get hot! I borrowed the money, and now he needs it."

She studied the list again. "You don't owe Tom thirty-five?"

"Yes, I do."

She ran her pencil down the list. "What a terrible lot of money for poker!"

"That," he said, "would right itself in time, but I thought it better not to count on it."

Mimi Adds Columns.

She began adding up the columns. "Alec! This isn't correct! It's three sixty-two, not three fifty-two!"

"No!"

"Of course it is!" She showed him.

"Oh, my gosh!" he groaned. "I didn't ask for enough!"

Two women and a man wanted to pay the cashier. Alec stepped back, impatient with them, and moved up to the desk again as soon as they were gone.

"It's so damn unnecessary!" he broke out. "If I hadn't any money it wouldn't be so exasperating!"

Mimi from long practice caught the allusion. She faced him with a wide smile. "You refer, I suppose, to your legacy. That tantalizing uncle of yours!"

He tilted his hat, so that he could rub the side of his head. "Why couldn't he leave it so I could use it now? I shan't need it nearly so bad when I'm 21!"

"Even if you had it now," protested Mimi, "that's a lot of money! I could live for six months on your debts!"

He resented the criticism. "It's not much, if you consider how long I've owed it."

When she laughed he lost his temper, and then she laughed harder. "What a kid you are!"

"Pardon me for offending your mature taste!" he snapped back.

"Don't be silly," she called; but another customer came between them, and when she had made change Alec was gone. She knew him too well to worry. He would have gone in any case, being penniless. He couldn't ask her for supper at Childs. He would have to eat now at the fraternity house.

He did not appear the next day, neither morning nor afternoon, nor the day after that. She was not surprised. He always studied conscientiously when he was broke. But the following afternoon he came into the drug store with signs of joy all over him. There was no shadow upon their love, and the economic crisis must have passed.

Spend 6 Minutes and learn how you could have SAVED $13.70
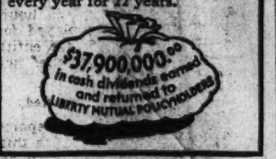
on Car Insurance

... If you would like to strengthen the quality and reduce the cost of your Automobile Insurance, all you need to do is to ask—and get the answers—to the six questions below. Then note how Liberty Mutual—world's largest mutual casualty insurance company—provides unusually sound, effective protection. More than 115,000 leading business concerns and individuals are using the Liberty Mutual Plan to reduce their insurance costs and to protect them against every form of loss which may result from accidents or damages to the persons or property of other people; also to indemnify them against loss to their own cars.

1. DOES THE COMPANY SELECT POLICYHOLDERS?
Accidents caused by policyholders are one of the two major factors that determine the quality and final cost of automobile insurance. Liberty Mutual will not solicit insurance from reckless, dangerous drivers. Result—Liberty has fewer accident losses to settle; the company is stronger and more secure; and under its strictly "mutual" plan, cash dividends of 20% have been earned and returned to policyholders every year for 22 years.

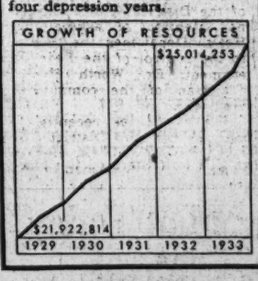
2. WHAT KIND OF A COMPANY IS IT?
There are two principal types of insurance companies—"stock" and "mutual." "Stock" companies are owned and operated by stockholders for their profit. "Mutual" companies are organized, owned and operated by policyholders and all profits belong to them. Liberty has regularly increased its resources, year after year, and, in addition, has earned and paid cash dividends of 20% to policyholders every year for 22 years.



3. DOES THE COMPANY SELL DIRECT?
Most insurance companies sell indirectly, through agents and brokers. Liberty Mutual sells only through full-time, salaried specialists. Note the huge saving under Liberty's direct selling plan.

4. DOES THE COMPANY SETTLE CLAIMS PROMPTLY AND FAIRLY?
No insurance company can be successful unless it investigates accidents promptly, settles claims fairly and relieves its policyholders of legal complications, expense and worry.
There are two ways to measure the quality of an insurance company's claim service. First, ask its policyholders (Liberty will gladly give you the names of its policyholders in your community). Second, note whether the company is growing—if it regularly increases the number of policyholders it insures.
6 times as many car-owners insured with Liberty Mutual in 1934 as in 1924

5. IS IT A STRONG, SAFE COMPANY?
You depend on your automobile insurance to safeguard your income, your savings and your home; also to cover loss or damage to your car. You must have unquestionable protection.
Liberty Mutual is the largest company of its kind in America and its 22 year 20% dividend record provides an extra margin of financial safety. Any part or all of the $37,900,000 which it has earned and returned to its policyholders could have been used to strengthen the company. But it was not needed.
Resources have shown a steady increase every year for many years, including each of the past four depression years.



6. WHAT WILL MY INSURANCE COST?
Insurance companies charge approximately the same initial rate for equal kinds and amounts of car insurance protection.
Your initial cost depends upon the kind of car you drive, the kinds of insurance you carry, and your place of residence.
But if you had been insured with Liberty Mutual in 1933, you would have made savings like those shown below, through its strictly mutual cash dividend return. The savings below are based on regular coverage. Personal Injury ($5,000-$10,000 standard limits); Property Damage ($5,000); and Fire and Theft Insurance (average valuations). Your saving would have been greater, of course, if you had carried Collision coverage and higher limits.

BLACKIE BEAR

Blackie Gets Another Sheepskin

BLACKIE had hardly gotten settled in his tree before Ram Sheep came out from behind the house, with a whole lot of wood. He soon had a big fire started, and he put up a rack all ready to hang the pot on as soon as Billie Goat got back with it. It wasn't long before Billie Goat came, and he had his pot and a big knife with him. He filled the pot up with water and hung it over the fire, and then he and Ram Sheep started to the old goat house to get Blackie. They crept up right easy, so they wouldn't wake him, for they knew they would have to kill him while he was asleep. Ram Sheep carried the big knife, and he intended to jump right in through the door and cut Blackie's head off. He jumped in the door, all right, but he didn't cut Blaekie's head off, as you know, for Blackie was away up in the big tree and looking down on all that Ram Sheep was doing, and having a quiet, little bear snicker.

Well, well. Ram Sheep and Billie Goat were mightily disappointed. Billie Goat was so mad because Ram Sheep had let Blackie get away that he wouldn't even stay to talk with Ram Sheep, but he put out for home right in the rain. But Ram Sheep didn't want to get any wetter, for when a lot of water gets in his wool he gets mighty cold, and besides, it's mighty heavy to carry, and so he decided to go into the goat house and take a nap and wait for the rain to stop.

From the tree that Blackie was hiding in he saw all of what Ram Sheep and Billie Goat had done, and he was laying plans to have a frolic of his own. And now here comes Jay Bird. Blackie told him all about what had been going on, and then he told him to fly fast to Jocko Monkey's house and tell him to come over as quick as he could. And then go to Dr. Coon and Billie Possum, and tell them to come. Jay Bird got back before any of the others came, and so Blackie told him to fly down to the goat house and see if Ram Sheep was fast asleep. Jay Bird came back and told Blackie that Ram Sheep was certainly dead asleep. Blackie came down from his tree and was standing by the pot where the water was boiling when Jocko Monkey got there.

"Jocko," said Blackie, "this pot was put here to cook a bear in, but I guess it will cook a sheep just as well, so get the knife, and come on."

Jocko got the big knife, and he and Blackie and Jay Bird crept over to the goat house. Jocko jumped right in and cut off Ram Sheep's head while he was asleep. Then he took off his skin and cut off his horns, and soon had him ready to put in the pot. By this time Billie Possum and Dr. Coon had come, and when Billie saw the big sheepskin he told Blackie that he was mighty glad that he had another sheepskin for his bed, for he knew that Blackie must miss the other one that he had given to Billie.

They all had a time cutting up Ram Sheep and cooking him, but after a while their dinner was done, and they had lots of fun over the fact that they were eating the enemy that wanted to kill and eat Blackie Bear, and that they had cooked him in the pot that he brought to cook Blackie Bear in.

Relief Pleas Exceed U. S. Job Demands

Hopkins Edict Limiting Length of Hours Held a Cause.

Only Half of 14,000 Work Cards Sent Out Returned.

With the new Emergency Relief Administration entering its second week, many more persons are applying for assistance than are seeking jobs, it was revealed yesterday.

More than 14,000 work cards have been sent out by the EWA but only 7,000 have been returned. On the other hand, applications for emergency relief at the Board of Public Welfare have tripled. More than 2,000 applications for emergency relief were received each day last week, and 175 additional investigators were employed to handle the increase.

Several factors are believed to be responsible for the relief situation. Chief among them is a regulation laid down by Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, which requires unskilled workmen to be employed at least 54 hours a month and skilled workers 30 hours. If they can not be employed for this length of time they are entitled to receive emergency relief without working.

Officials Dissatisfied.

District officials are reported to be highly dissatisfied with this regulation and are anxious to have it abolished. Originally, the 54-hour provision applied to skilled workers as well. This meant that a bricklayer, for instance, could make as much as $80 a month, while many unskilled workers could make only $19.

Such violent objections were expressed by District officials to this regulation that it was changed, putting skilled workers in a 30-hour category. Now District authorities are reported to be asking Mr. Hopkins to abolish the hour limitation entirely.

If this were done, it was held, the work program could be more easily manipulated and some work could be made available for everyone.

Stronger efforts on the part of former CWA workers to find other jobs, with successful results in many cases, is another reason attributed for the decline in applications for work under the EWA. Pay under the CWA was higher, it was pointed out, and consequently workers were not so anxious to find other jobs.

Restrictions Cited.

Still another factor is the fact that stronger restrictions are placed on applicants for work under EWA. The object of the CWA was to provide work for the unemployed in general. Under the EWA jobs are given only to those actually in dire need.

Leroy A. Halbert, director of District emergency relief, pointed out that no definite conclusion can yet be reached because the change from the CWA to the EWA is still in process of transition. He observes that some delay was probably incurred in sending out the 14,000 work cards and there is also some delay in returning the cards on the part of those who have received them.

It will be at least a week, he believes, before the real results of the change from CWA to EWA can be obtained. He said only an extremely small element endeavors to obtain emergency relief rather than work, and pointed out it is difficult for a man to evade work if it is available. Mr. Halbert expressed confidence that by the end of the week the number of persons on the work list will be far in excess of those receiving emergency relief.

New Stamp Due Soon—But of No Use for Postage

For the first time in history, the Postoffice Department soon will issue a stamp that can not be used for postage purposes.

It will be a $1 Federal migratory bird stamp to be affixed to all licenses issued to migratory water fowl hunters. The department will print 5,000,000 of these stamps, to be sold in all county seat postoffices and in communities of 2,500 population or more.

The migratory bird conservation act is effective June 16.

Bright skies and sunshine led thousands to the Zoo yesterday. And were the animals pleased to see all the kids again and many new ones who weren't old enough to go last year! The polar bears shown in this picture put on a special act, performing a number of new tricks that they had learned during the winter.

Nerts! This is what the elephant was reported to have said when asked by crowds at the Zoo yesterday why he insisted on putting his trunk through the bars. He probably meant peanuts. Anyway, he got plenty.

Doctors Deny Seeking U. S. Rule in District

Medical Society's Aim Held Only to Get Aid of Expert.

The committee on public health of the District Medical Society has no intention of asking that the Health Department be turned over to the control of the Federal Government, Dr. Worth B. Daniels, chairman of the committee, said yesterday.

The committee recently recommended that the District Commissioners ask the Public Health Service to lend them a man to reorganize and administer the Health Department. The recommendation was tabled by the membership of the society, but it is expected to be taken up later.

Dr. Daniels pointed out that the Public Health Service had sent men to New York and Virginia at the request of those States to take over reorganization of their health departments. He recalled that Massachusetts had done the same thing some years ago.

Precedent Called Ample.

"The Department of Health of Massachusetts now stands out as a striking able group," he said.

Similarly, Dr. Daniels said, the Public Health Service has sent a man to New York at the request of Mayor LaGuardia to head that city's department of communicable diseases.

"There is ample precedent for our suggestion," Dr. Daniels said. "The department would continue under the jurisdiction of the District Commissioners. The department head would be paid by the District. He could be fired by the District Commissioners.

"Under this plan, the District would be assured that it had a man as the head of its Health Department who was trained in that particular field. Heading a health department is just as much a specialty as brain surgery.

"The committee, however, is not insisting that the man who heads the Health Department actually come from the Public Health Service. Our principal interest is to obtain the services of a well trained, able man.

"We do suggest that the Commissioners consult with the Surgeon General in picking out a man to head the department. He is in a position to know who such men are and where such men are available. Neither the Commissioners nor practicing physicians of the District are in a position to know these things.

"If a man should be lent to the District by the Public Health Service he would stay only long enough to see his processes through."

The exceptionally high death rate from tuberculosis was given by the committee as one of the reasons why it recommended that an experienced public health officer head the department. The committee pointed out that the death rate from tuberculosis in the District is 120 per 100,000 population, as compared with 70 in New York, 63 in Chicago, 41 in Minneapolis, 33 in Akron and 32 in Syracuse.

School Board To Probe Union Threat Charge

Engineer Adams Accused of Coercion to Prevent Aids From Joining.

Charges that engineers in the colored District schools are being coerced against joining a newly formed local affiliate of the International Union of Operating Engineers will be placed before the Board of Education this week, it was learned yesterday.

The charges will be brought by Local No. 102, of the operating engineers, composed of engineers in the white schools. Complaint will be made specifically against H. R. Adams, chief engineer in the colored schools.

Adams, it is alleged, has warned colored engineers that they will be dismissed if they join the union. He is said to have ordered the retirement of one engineer who joined the union and is contemplating dismissal of others.

A resolution adopted last week by the union of white engineers protested against "unfair tactics resorted to by the administrative heads of public schools to inject discord into a progressive movement, designed for the efficient and economical operation and management of the public school buildings of the District."

The Board of Education will be asked to instruct Adams to discontinue his alleged intimidation of the colored engineers. If this is not done, an appeal will be made to Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, it was announced.

White school engineers have expressed dissatisfaction with the Board of Education's policy regarding the duties of engineers. A brief has been placed before the board, asking that engineers be allowed to perform their specific duties rather than be used as "jack-of-all-trades," a practice to which they now claim they are subjected.

School Menus To Add Baked Foods Today

Action Follows Sharp Criticism Made by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Free Food May Be Continued During Summer Months.

With the reopening of schools today after the Easter holidays, baked food will be introduced on the menus of the free lunches.

Absence of baked dishes was criticized by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt when she inspected the lunches during the holidays. Equipment for baking is lacking at the central school kitchen, and will be done by Earl E. Harrington, the restaurateur, who prepared all the school lunches up to the time the central kitchen took over the program.

Mr. Harrington will bake food for a third of the children each day. The food will be sent to the central kitchen and distributed to the various schools.

School principals today will begin making estimate of exactly how many children availed themselves of the opportunity to be served the free lunches during the holidays, in accordance with a request of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of the Board of Education.

Indications have been given that if the response was great enough the program will be continued through the summer, with Saturday, and possibly Sunday, included.

Rough estimates made daily by Mrs. Katherine McF. Ansley, director of the lunch kitchen, showed that at least 5,000 children went to the schools each day during the holidays for the lunches. Nearly 7,000 are served during the regular school period.

This Early Bird Landed in Jail

This bird was up early, or out late, and found himself in the lock-up. He spent some hours in Seventh Police Precinct station before being released in custody of his young mistress, Patricia Clements, shown with him.

Duck Ducks Out for the Night; Goes to Jail at Daybreak.

Found—"Do you wanna buy a duck? Station Number Seven has a live one, found in roadway at Foxhall and Reservoir roads northwest at 6:35 a. m."—From police teletype.

Yesterday was a big day for Reggie.

Perhaps it all began with a big night the night before. No one knows.

But at any rate Reggie got himself arrested for his trouble, had a ride in a police car, remained behind the bars for five or six hours, had his plight broadcast all over the city on the police teletype system, and only after his owner and the owner's family had looked everywhere for him was he rescued from the sad fate looming for him.

Reggie was up early or out late. At 6:30 a. m., Policeman G. M. Stewart, of Number Seven Precinct, discovered him. He was walking unsteadily, there's no doubt of that. And the suspicions of the officer probably were justified. Stewart seized Reggie and carried him off to jail. There he was given his nickname. The police teletype description of him was sent out. But it was not until after noon that Warren Clements, 1662 Foxhall road northwest, in whose household Reggie belongs, located him, in his disgrace, and took him home to his young mistress, Patricia Clements, 2 years old. She was willing enough to forgive him, and Reggie apparently was secure and happy last night.

Reggie was bought, in his infancy, at a dime store. He had a sister, bought at the same time, but she was run over by an automobile. Now his only feathered companion is a big red rooster, another household pet. But, of course, he has Patricia, and she's his buddy.

Border Town Hits Tax, Trade Wanes

Piedmont, W. Va., April 8 (Spl.). The 2 per cent sales tax, which went into effect in West Virginia, April 1, has perplexed the merhants of this place and other border West Virginia towns. They claim it has caused a hardship as Piedmont borders on Maryland, being the central town between Luke and Westernport, Md.

West Virginia derived much business from these two Maryland towns and many of the customers have served notice on Piedmont merchants that they will not buy in West Virginia and pay West Virginia taxes. Merchants here claim business has fallen off 25 to 50 per cent.

NRA Chiseling Laid To Virginia Plants

Richmond, April 8 (AP).—Owners of many industrial plants in Richmond are disregarding their pledges to the NRA, W. F. Robinson, president of the Richmond Central Trade Council, said in a speech here last night at the labor temple.

"The employers are using every subterfuge under the sun to evade their NRA obligations," he said. "They have used every conceivable device to discourage the organization of unorganized workers. The small attendance we have at meetings in this hall is evidence of that fact. Lookouts have been stationed to see who attends these meetings. The unorganized workers are afraid to come here."

Robinson named none of the industrial plants he accused, but cited what he said were specific instances.

PWA Finance Parley on D.C. Jobs Is Called

Ickes, Commission to Study Allotments Wednesday.

$20,000,000 to Be Asked for Improvement, Buildings.

Methods of financing proposed PWA projects in the District will be discussed Wednesday at conference of the District Commissioners and Secretary Ickes, which was called by the PWA administrator to discuss allotments for the Capital.

Although the Commissioners profess to be committed to no definite proposal, it was learned that they lean to the belief that the District should bear "a fair proportion of the costs." If the District should attempt to borrow money to pay its share, legislation would be required to give money-borrowing power, which it now lacks.

Seek Outright Grants.

A request for the conference was sent to the Commissioners Saturday by Secretary Ickes, and all of the Commissioners will attend. Their first approach, it is understood, will be to obtain as much as possible by outright grants, and if they are unsuccessful they will discuss other programs.

"We want to get some money," Commissioner George E. Allen said. "At least $20,000,000 is required for necessary improvements. I am particularly anxious to get the money when it is available. It will aid in the recovery program by relieving unemployment."

Although the District has requests before the PWA Administration in excess of $30,000,000, the Commissioners are anxious to obtain the $20,000,000, at least, for improvements and construction, they believe, urgently needed.

Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen believe that the pressing necessities are the construction of a $2,000,000 tuberculosis sanitarium, the first unit of the municipal center at an estimated cost of $4,900,000, to include quarters for the Municipal Court, Police Court, Juvenile Court and police headquarters; an $8,000,000 sewerage disposal plant; an addition to Gallinger Hospital and a new District Morgue at an aggregate cost of $1,000,000, and a school construction program involving an annual expenditure of $2,000,000 until adequate school facilities are available.

Frowns on New Grants.

Secretary Ickes has expressed himself as averse to making further outright grants to the District for purely municipal enterprises, having the opinion that the Capital should be placed on the same basis as any other municipality which is required to pay 70 per cent of the PWA projects. This percentage is advanced by the PWA, secured by municipal notes. The balance is paid by the Federal Government.

Should the Commissioners be unable to secure more absolute grants, they face the alternative of asking for money-borrowing power or increasing taxation.

Stoefen Strengthens Davis Cup Bid, Routing Allison in Straight Sets

Service Kept Throughout Match

Youth's Blinding Speed Marks 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 Finals Victory.

Texan Is Given Little Chance to Use His Good Net Game.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 8 (AP).—Lester Stoefen, gangling 23-year-old tennis wizard from Los Angeles, strengthened his bid for a singles position on the United States Davis Cup team by overwhelming Wilmer Allison, of Austin, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2, in the finals of the River Oaks tournament today.

Allison was one of this Nation's representatives last year in singles competition for the Davis Cup, but the thoroughness with which Stoefen trounced him convinced observers that the Californian would shove him aside, with Allison perhaps pairing with the veteran George Lott in the doubles.

Stoefen's blinding service was the major factor in his one-sided victory, but his accurate placements with both forehand and backhand, and his volleying also contributed. The National indoor champion gave Allison little chance to flash his efficient net game, smashing hard to keep him in the back court most of the time.

Stoefen Holds Service.

Allison was unable to break Stoefen's service even once. On the other hand, the Californian won half the games which the former University of Texas star served. Stoefen came here from Atlanta, where he won an invitation tournament. He trimmed Allison in their last previous meeting in Bermuda a month ago.

Miss Jane Sharp, of Los Angeles, made it a banner day for California netters by beating Miss Eugenie Sampson, of Chicago, 6—2, 6—3, in the women's finals. Miss Sharp had eliminated Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, fifth ranking player in the United States two years ago, in the semifinals, and she and Mrs. Harris had captured the doubles championship.

Stoefen teamed with Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, to down Allison, and George Lott, of Chicago, 6—3, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2, in the doubles final. Allison and the Chicagoan had been top-seeded.

D. C. Pinwomen On Top in Two Title Events

Ream-Butler Lead Doubles as Miss Gulli Shows Way in All Events.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 8 (Spl.).—Evelyn Ream and Billie Butler, Washington, took the lead in the women's doubles event of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress Tournament here this afternoon with a combined score of 701, topping Kathleen Stevens and Katherine Vick, of Norfolk, by seven pins. Mrs. Ream rolled 374, and Mrs. Butler 327.

Another championship loomed for Washington when Lorraine Gulli collected 315 pins in her doubles effort to take the women's all events with 1,114. The queen of the maplewavs had rolled 366 in singles and a world record, 433, with her Lucky Strike team which leads the team event with 1,762.

Tronsky Sets Record.

Demonstrating his superior bowling ability over all the expert duckpinners of the country, and ever capable or rising to the heights when the stakes are high, Nick Tronsky, the famous Connecticut Blue Ribbon shooter, took the lead in the singles event of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress Tournament here at the Recreation Alleys today with a record score of 453. His games were 138, 174 and 141.

Tony Santini, with a brilliant display of hitting the head pin, was practically assured of the Knights of Columbus Sweepstakes when his record score of 652 sent him to the front over Hugh Crawley, the Mount Rainier roller, who had led the event with 603.

Hyattsville, Md., was heard from when Bob Temple and Perce Wolfe shot a combined score of 784 to place second in the doubles, and trailing close behind came a couple of teammates, Oscar Hiser and Harry Hillard, with a 775 score, to take third place.

Stewart Again Winner.

Phoenix, Ariz., April 8 (AP).—Verne "Spec" Stewart, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., set a Southwestern Golf Association Tournament record today by winning the championship for the fourth straight year. Stewart, a freshman at Stanford University, defeated Bob Goldwater, of Phoenix, former titlist, 5 and 3, in the 36-hole final.

Tarheels' Nine Reaches Top Of Heap

Leads Conference's List With 3 Triumphs; Crouch Is Star.

RICHMOND, Va., April 8 (AP).—Effective pitching and timely hitting placed the University of North Carolina Tarheels at the top of the list today with a perfect score after a week of Southern Conference baseball play.

Fred Crouch, the Tarheels' mound ace, was credited with two of the victories over loop foes, an 8-to-2 triumph over Washington and Lee and a 6-to-1 victory over Virginia Tech, and Manley held V. M. I. sufficiently well in check yesterday while his mates smashed out a 16-to-6 decision.

Crouch, who seems to have relieved Coach Bunn Hearn of some of his preseason pitching worries, showed midseason form in limiting the Generals to three hits to set the Tarheels on the victory road in defense of their 1933 championship. A few days later he allowed only five scattered hits and held the hard-hitting Virginia Techmen to one run.

Ruble's Feat Best.

The best pitching accomplishment of the week, however, was credited to Ralph Ruble who pitched Maryland to a 3-to-0 victory over Virginia in ten innings yesterday in the Old Liners' opening game.

The week's play was a big disappointment to South Carolina's well-liked Gamecocks, who lost a double-header to Duke's Blue Devils, who moved up behind the leaders with three victories in four starts. Clemson gave the Devils their only setback.

The standings of Southern Conference teams follow:

22,000 Watch As Phils Beat A's, 8 to 1

Haslin Hero for Winners With 4 Hits in City's First Sunday Tilt.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8 (AP).—Making their home-town debut, the revamped Phillies trimmed the made-over Athletics, 8 to 1, today in the first of the annual five-game spring series for the city championship.

The game was Philadelphia's first legalized Sunday baseball since Sabbath sport was authorized by the voters last November. About 22,000 fans turned out.

Haslin Is Hero.

Mickey Haslin, subbing at short for Dick Bartell, was the hero of the game, pounding out four hits for the Phils in four times at bat. One of these was a scorching triple down the left-field line.

The Athletics put their three Oklahoma League hurlers on parade for inspection of the Sunday crowd. Vernon Kennedy, in three innings, was tagged for three runs; Al Benton allowed one single in two innings and struck out three Phils in a row; Harry Matuzak gave up four runs in three innings. Tim McKeithan worked one inning and yielded one run.

Klein Is Hero For Cubs as Nats Bow

Drives in or Scores All of Alien Runs; Home Run Among 3 Hits.

Poor Fielding by Nats Is Costly; Warneke Tight in Pinches.

the eighth inning when the Cubs were riding the rickety crest of a 3-2 lead and Kiki Cuyler was reposing on first base with one out and the 15,000 Cub fans imploring Mr. Klein to do something about the matter.

Klein Answers Prayer.

Mr. Klein chose as his offering at that moment a nice long home run that whizzed toward the right field, over the upturned head of Outfielder Johnny Stone, finally to tumble into the laps of the mildly insane bleacher fans who were witnessing the first concrete evidence of the vaunted power of the man the rich Cubs had bought from the poor Phillies last winter.

The innocent bystander at this time was Tommy Thomas, who in this same park used to pin back the ears of the Cubs for the White Sox during the Chicago city series of the late twenties. Thomas had assumed the Nats' pitching duties in the seventh after accepting a 3-2 deficit from Al Crowder, who had unsuccessfully held the Cubs to seven hits in six innings.

Warneke Goes Route.

Thus the Nats' final game of the spring barnstorming tour ended in somewhat of a minor key, what with Cub pitcher No. 1, one Lon Warneke, holding them to seven hits over the full nine-inning route; but, if I do say it myself, the Nats deserved a better fate.

I'm taking you back to the fourth inning when the Cubs, by a combination of strange circumstances, scored the two runs that put them in the ball game forever after, an inning when no runs should have been scored.

Washington was enjoying a legitimate 1-0 lead as a result of Joe Cronin's lusty triple and an infield out in the fourth inning, when the Cubs' half arrived on schedule.

Nats Look Bad.

Woody English opened the festivities for the Cubs with a line drive to Cronin, who made a one-hand stab of the ball, only to see it fall from his glove. With plenty of time to pick it up and throw the hitter out at first base, the Nats' manager heaved in the general direction of Kuhel, but the direction was too general and the ball ended up against the field boxes, with English trotting to second base.

But that was mild compared to what happened a moment later when Bill Herman popped a short fly into right center. Dave Harris was in centerfield, having replaced Fred Schulte, and Johnny Stone was in right. By the time they decided to refer to The Hague the matter of which would catch Hermann's fly, it had dropped safely between them for a two-base hit, and there were runners on second and third.

Pop Goes as Two-Bagger.

English clattered home from third with the tying run when Cuyler lifted a long fly to Harris, but with the dangerous Klein at bat Harris took up a station in the outfield on the borders of suburban Evanston. Consequently, and subsequently, Klein's harmless pop to short centerfield fell for a two-base hit, and the Cubs had their 2 to 1 lead. They got another in the sixth off Crowder when Grimm hit a single with Klein on second base.

The Nats left the ball game on the bases today, as we say on occasions of this sort when ten men languish on the paths awaiting rescue measures from their teammates that take the form of strikeouts and pop-ups. They got a run back in the seventh when Myer walked and got around the bases on Manush's single and Cronin's infield out, but they made nothing whatsoever of a swell opportunity in the fifth when, with the bases full, Dave Harris swung what proved to be the third strike.

North Carolina Nine to Face Generals

Meets Foe at Lexington Today and Virginia's Team Tomorrow.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., April 8 (Spl.).—The Carolina Baseball Team, which has made life hard for opposing pitchers in early season games, will play Washington and Lee at Lexington tomorrow and Virginia at Charlottesville on Tuesday, opening a busy week for the Tarheels entries in all spring sports.

Other events on the week's schedule include the North-South Tourney beginning at Pinehurst tomorrow for the tennis team, a freshman baseball game with Louisburg College here Wednesday, and a golf match with Duke at Hope Valley Wednesday and Thursday afternoon.

Meet Hoya Trackmen.

Wake Forest will be met in baseball, Georgetown in track, the Lynchburg Country Club in tennis, and Furman in golf on a program of four home contests carded for Saturday.

The Carolina nine, which is defending champion in both the Big Five and Southern Conference, won a previous engagement from Washington and Lee, 9-2, Fred Crouch pitching a three-hit game, while his mates fell on Lefty Sauerbrum, the General ace, for 16 safeties.

The contest with Virginia will be the first in a three-game series between the old rivals, while the Wake Forest game will open a home-and-home series.

Crouch Due To Hurl.

According to the schedule of alternations Coach Bunn Hearn followed on the first part of the Virginia trip last week, the veteran Crouch is due to face Washington and Lee again and the big sophomore righthander, Ernest McKeithan, to take the mound against Virginia.

The order may be changed, however, to use the veteran Crouch against Virginia, which has a great pitcher in Orlin Rogers, who struck out 19 men in one of the Cavaliers' games last week.

Dentist Extracts 2 of Grove's Teeth

Harris Believes Trouble Will Now Disappear.

Birmingham, Ala., April 8 (AP).—Manager Bucky Harris of the Boston Red Sox said today that apparently the source of trouble in Robert Moses Grove's $100,000 pitching arm had been located in infected teeth.

Grove's teeth were X-rayed this morning and three of them were found to be abscessed. A dentist extracted two uppers and a third must be removed later.

"I believe that will clear up the trouble," said Harris.

Grove was to accompany the Red Sox to Atlanta tonight, and will leave the team there to go to Philadelphia, rejoining the Boston Club later.

Throughout spring training Grove had been troubled with a pain in his pitching arm, and some apprehension had been felt as to whether he would be able to take his regular turn on the mound.

English Rugby Some Game

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, April 8 (Spl.).—There was a slight disposition to spoof the English game of Rugby as demonstrated at Ohio Field yesterday afternoon, when fifteens representing Cambridge and Harvard Universities staged the first of a series of international matches, but I can not say that I am inclined to join it. True, it was amusing to hear parties in the stands who looked to me as though they had never been any closer to Great Britain than Delancy street crying "Feet! Feet!" and "Well played, Cambridge!" and "Scrum! Scrum!" but, otherwise, I saw nothing funny about the game. It struck me as a hard, bruising, fast, brilliant sport in which a man had to be in the best condition of his life—or else. For the firs: time in my life I realized how the Englishman feels seeing his first game of American baseball. There is as much sense to cries of "Feet! Feet!" and "Kick it into touch!" as there is to "Slide, Kelly, slide" It all depends what you are used to.

To me the chief charm of Rubby is the fluidity of the game, its flowing-forward motion which is unchecked by tackling. In the American game, the sequence of action, as you know, is checked and halted by the tackle. As soon as the knee or hand of the runner comes into contact with the ground the ball is "dead" and the play is over. The fallen heroes pick themselves up and reline and it starts all over again.

In Rugy the tackle never halts the play. Either the man who is tackled shoots a lateral or backward pass to a teammate, or if smothered and fairly brought down before he can get rid of the ball he must release it, letting it roll loosely on the ground to be kicked, or dribbled, or picked up by any one who wants to take the chance of being annihilated.

Only three things stop the progress of the game, a forward pass, which is not permitted at any time, all passing having to be lateral or backward as in hockey; a foul, such as holding, or the ball going into "touch," which is merely the English name for out of bounds. For some reason, which I could not fathom, it is considered good Rugby to kick out of bounds to your opponent if you make no more than 10 or 15 yards doing so.

Inasmuch as the ball may be advanced by dribbling it with the feet as in soccer, by running and passing it, and by kicking it, and since the complete tackle does not stop the play, you will see how the game goes on at an amazing pace. If it were not for the occasional foul, or the kick or run out of bounds, the players would certainly drop in complete exhaustion at the end of five minutes. Speed and uncanny skill at passing are combined with cleaner, harder tackling than exists in American football for the simple reason that it is not sufficient for the tackler to bring the runner down. He must stop him, throw him and smother him at the same time so that he can not get the ball off in a pass to a teammate.

And don't get the idea that it is a sissy game or a softer edition of football. Fifteen men make up a side. No substitutions are permitted at any time. Shades of the American game, where sometimes 30 men are used on a team of 11, where assistant managers have to act as bookkeepers to keep track of the number of minutes per game per year that each hero plays! What happens when a man is hurt and can not continue in Rugby? His team goes on playing a man or two short. It is just too bad if your men can't stand up. Cambridge suffered the loss of a man with a chipped ankle on Saturday and blithely and successfully played on with 14.

Harvard cheerfully and willingly acted as the guinea pigs in this experiment. It was a good thing, perhaps, that the Harvard boys were so inexperienced in the game and so declined to pass the ball. It stressed the finesse of the English players and gave the nonexpert spectators an opportunity of seeing just what a well-drilled Rugby team could do and the lengths to which a good lateral passing game could be carried. The Harvard boys wanted to play football—that is, take the ball and go some place with it individually. No sooner did a Cambridge man get his mitts on it than he was looking for some one to shoot it to. The English boys passed even when they had a clear field before them. And how they passed, throwing and catching the ball on the dead run, picking it out of the air sometimes with one hand as they ran. The game certainly is a thriller to watch. Me for another look at it next Saturday.

Mason and Dixon Golf Qualifying Set Today

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 8 (Spl.).—The fourteenth annual Mason and Dixon golf championship matches will be played over the Old White course here this week by a strong field of amateur golfers, including several players who have won the tournament in past years. The qualifying rounds will start tomorrow and the 36-hole final matches are scheduled for Friday. The week's play will be concluded with a two-ball mixed foursome on Saturday.

Roof Gilson, of Jackson, Mich., 1933 champion, is expected to defend his title.

Corbett-Courtney Bout in '94 Staged for Edison; First Ever Filmed.

By Bill McCormick.

HALF a dozen men clustered at the rail of a ferry boat plowing across the North River from Manhattan to the Jersey shore. Six men muffled against the brisk morning air—five of them instinctively forming a protective circle around the best-dressed and handsomest of the lot. James J. Corbett, heavyweight champion of the world, and his retinue, en route to the work shop of the young inventor, Tom Edison, who is this September 7, 1894, to make the first film record of a complete prize fight.

With the tall, dark-haired champion are William A. Brady, his manager, who is to act as timekeeper; Jack Dempsey, the Nonpariel, who is to second Pompadour Jim in this bout; John McVey and Frank Belcher, coseconds, and Bud Woodthorpe, Corbett's bottle holder.

Docking in New Jersey, the party boards a connecting train for West Orange, where it is met by Edison. He escorts them to the "Black Maria" in which the fight is to be filmed before a small crowd in addition to Edison and his assistant. The first movie studio, a small wooden shack mounted on a circular track so it can be swung around to receive the direct rays of the sun, is painted a jet black throughout to dull light reflections.

No Easy Mark.

Pete Courtney, of Trenton, N. J., the challenger, and his handlers, are already there when Corbet arrives. Courtney, a Pennsylvanian, is no easy mark for even a champion such as Corbett. He has been developed under the skilled tutelage of Jack McCulley, another boxer from Trenton, and has defeated Ed Warner, generally considered the heavyweight champion of New Jersey, with a second-round knockout. He also has knocked out Jim Glynn and pounded the daylights out of Jack Welsh and Jim Dwyer, but is perhaps proudtest of having stayed four rounds with the up-and-coming little Bob Fitzsimmons in an exhibition match.

When Tom Edison first sought to stage a fight to be filmed by his newly devised kinetascope, an effort was made to secure John L. Sullivan, from whom Corbett had taken the title, but the Mighty John L. demanded $25,000 for the bout. Corbett is to receive $5,000 for the match and Courtney gets a minimum $500—and $1,000 additional if he stays six rounds.

The contestants are made ready and enter the ring shortly before noon—early for a prize fight, but necessary to catch the precious rays o fthe autumn sun. Corbett weighs 189—slightly more than his top-condition poundage. Courtney, trained to the minute, tips the beam at 180. Referee John Eckhardt call them to the center of the ring for the routine instructions and reminds them that two-minute rounds are to be fought, as only enough film for two minutes continuous shooting can be crammed into the bulky kinetascope.

Round 1—Courtney rushes furiously from thecorner in an attempt to smother the champion, but Corbett ducks expertly and good-naturedly, rolling his overanxious opponent around in the clinches and keeping him continually off-balance. Midway of the round he launches a terrific body attack and suddenly shifts to the face, staggering Courtney with a left to the ear. The challenger retaliates with a boring-in body at-

Talk of K. O. Gallagher's Pet Peeve

Brown Hasn't a Chance to Stop Him, Says Capital Fighter.

Both Men in Good Trim for Bout Tomorrow at Portner's.

ANGERED by confident predictions of a knockout emanating from the enemy's camp, Marty Gallagher, local mighty, majestic monarch of maul promises to be aggressive as he has never been aggressive before against Natie Brown in their ten-round bout at Portner's tomorrow.

"Natie's a good boy, and I'm not underrating him," the Foggy Bottom fist-slipper offered after a spirited workout at the Jewish Community Center yesterday. "But—so far as knocking me out, he hasn't got a chance. I'll be all over him like a snowstorm, and whoever heard of knocking out a snowstorm."

Gallagher's promises of fast and furious action are backed up for this particular fight by his fine physical condition. He weighs 205 pounds now and at any poundage below 206 or 207 he can take the offensive—above that figure, he merely becomes offensive, to the spectators.

Presage Fast Attack.

The Georgetown heavyweight's actions in the gymnasium also have presaged a whirlwind attack from the opening bell. He has been flailing sparmates about with reckless abandon, taking three punches to land one and continually "bulling" in on top. Tactics such as these may render Brown's superior boxing skill null and void—or they may lead Marty smack into one of the rejuvenated contender's knockout punches.

In his last serious workout before the fight, Brown continued to wallop his sparring partners unmercifully yesterday. Against big, tough Jeff Thomas, his colored training opponent, Brown was particularly vicious.

"Ah've worked with Harry Wills and George Godfrey," confesses the gigantic puncher, who trained both these fighters for important fights, "but neither of 'em was as tough as Brown. He punches like a mule, is a pretty good boxer and is always wading in with everything he's got. Man, sir, I think Natie's gonna knock this Gallagher feller flatter than a bride's biscuits in a hurry. Ah feels kind a sorry for him."

Green Faces Charles.

Approaching the Brown-Gallagher embroglio in local interest will be the scheduled six-round semifinal between Joe Green and Baby Charles. Both local prospects have large followings and the settling of the matter of supremacy promises a pretty contest.

Petey Bevan mingles with Al Parks in another six. One more six and a four will round out the program.

Tigers Send Davis, 2 Others to Minors

Toledo Gets $50,000 First Baseman on Option.

Lakeland, Fla., April 8 (AP).—Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers today announced the release of First Baseman Harry Davis, Catcher Gene Desautels and Shortstop Frank Parker. All leave under optional agreements making them subject to recall. Desautels and Davis go to the Toledo Club, of the American Association, and Parker returns to Beaumont, in the Texas League.

The release of Davis rounds out a deal reported to have cost the Tigers $50,000. He came to Detroit from Toronto at the opening of the 1932 season, purchased on the insistence of former Manager Bucky Harris. Davis made good at once, but last year was displaced as a regular by Hank Greenberg.

Desautels, a young catcher who came to the Tigers from Holy Cross College, had requested that he be sent to Toledo to work under Steve O'Neill, where, with plenty of work in prospect, he believes he will develop faster.

Parker, a flashy fielder, was considered still too weak with the stick for big-league competition.

Champion Atcheson Scores at Handball

New York, April 8 (AP).—Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, the defending champion, opened defense of his National A. A. U. Four-Wall Handball title at the New York A. C. today by trouncing O. Kramer, of New York, 21-7, 21-8.

Atcheson, who captured the title a year ago after it had eluded him for nearly seven years, was not extended at any time.

Among other winners today were William McKaharer, of Germantown, Pa., who defeated Timothy Sweeney, of New York, 21-9, 14-21, 21-16.

Joe H. Matthews, of Kansas City, was eliminated by Edward Linz, of New York, 21-8, 12-21, 21-7; Frank Zandler of St. Louis was put out by Harry Cazarian, New York, 21-12, 21-17, and William Snyder, of Boston, lost to John Walsh, of New York, 21-13, 21-16.

Whitney Stable Concentrates on Three $7,500 Stakes at Havre de Grace

Seeks Lead For Fifth Season

Equipoise Is Again Hope in Phila. Handicap; Big String Ready.

Section to Be Shipped From Kentucky for 'Graw Meeting.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 8 (Spl.).—Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, of New York, America's leading money winning owner for the past four years, will concentrate on the three $7,500 stakes to be run during the 12-day spring meeting, which opens here April 16, in an effort to surpass the record of the late James R. Keene, whose thoroughbreds topped America's list from 1905 to 1903, inclusive.

Not only will young Jack Healey, who has more than a dozen horses in training at Bowie come here, but the latter's father, Thomas J. Healey, head trainer for the New York sportsman, will bring Equipoise, the world's fourth largest money winning thoroughbred and other stars up from winter quarters at Lexington, Ky.

Sonny Workman and Alfred Robertson, two of the best knights of the pigskin in this country, will be on hand to pilot anything toting the Eton blue and brown silks of young Whitney, therefore it can be seen that America's leading money winning owner for the past four years isn't overlooking a single bet in his effort to make it five in a row.

Chesapeake Draws Stars.

Roustabout, Fogbound, Jabot and Collateral candidates for the Kentucky Derby, will be C. V. Whitney's mainstays in the $7,500 Chesapeake to be run over the 1 1-16-mile mile route on April 28, the closing day of the meeting.

Equipoise, of course, will be the young New Yorker's hope for the $7,500 Philadelphia Handicap, 1 1-16 miles event, listed for April 21.

Just what 2-year-olds will carry the Eton blue and brown silks in the $7,500 Aberdeen, a four and one-half furlong sprint on April 25, is unknown at this writing, but turfites can rest assured that they will be up to the stable's standard of previous years.

It is going to be a real battle for purses here as Edward Riley Bradley, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, George D. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Anall Stable, Jersey Stable, J. W. Y. Martin and others of the country's leading racing establishments will be on hand for what promises to be one of the finest spring sessions ever offered at this picturesque course, whose land is washed by the sparkling waters of the Susquehanna River.

Good Weather Is Hope.

General Manager Edward Burke and his staff have been on the job for some time. He reports a big demand for clubhouse and private box seats and is confident the forthcoming session will furnish plenty of exciting sport, providing the weather man is on his good behavior.

The racing strip, according to horsemen, who have been working their charges over it, is faster than a year ago. However, it contains a cushion which permits horses to work over it in safety. This is no small tribute to Superintendent James Ross, who is doing everything possible to have the course at tops for the approaching meeting.

THE UNITED STATES HAD 3 PRESIDENTS IN ONE YEAR! HAYES, GARFIELD AND ARTHUR... -1881-
4-9-34

Strange as it seems, the United States had more Presidents in 1881 than in any other calendar year in its history. During that year Rutherford B. Hayes was President up to March 4, at which time his successor, James A. Garfield, was inaugurated with Chester A. Arthur as vice president.

President Garfield held office actively until July 2, that year, when he was shot by the assassin, Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office seeker, in a railway station in Washington. He died 80 days later, on September 19, in Elberon, N. J. Succeeding him as Chief Executive was Vice President Arthur, who was sworn into office on the following day—the third President to hold office in 1881.

Jean Roy, French radio announcer at the Radio-Toulouse, is dean of all announcers. He has been on the air more than 20,000 hours—not speaking all the time, of course, but on the air and on duty all the time.

He never missed a program from the time he went to work in 1925 until last year, when the station burned down. The station is in operation again now, and Announcer Roy is back on the job. He estimates that his time on duty during the eight years amounted to an average of 10 hours per working day.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Bowie Race Track, April 9.

Bennings, Inc., spuulied four winners Saturday to end the week just as we started. We kept our stable race average at 1.000 by chasing Soon Over home in the Rowe Memorial Handicap. The three others were Angelic, Lough Port and Rego, the last named at a $9.70 mutuel. If we keep this up they will be giving us the "saliva test" before the meeting closes. Mike and I are facing the coming week with heads erect and chins out, but I don't mind telling you that it promises to be a tough one for both selectors and betters. Horses that wintered in the North have had the benefit of 10 days of good weather. They are rounding into form now and the Florida and New Orleans bangtails are going to find their grip on the purse slipping.

BILL.

First race—Bank Holiday had the benefit of much education in Florida and ran a rather encouraging race behind Up and Up here opening day. This looks like the spot for graduation ceremonies. Specs turned in a shifty effort down South and could be dangerous in this group. Color Bearer raced greenly in his only appearance. May improve today.

Second race—Retribution was a fast-closing second to Marge's 6 furlongs in 1:15 the other day. At that she was away from the post slowly. A more alert getaway today may find this filly sailing to the main end of the purse. Trillium's outing here was a good one. Bungalow showed high speed after the winter lay-off and improvement would find him battling for the top position.

Third race—Rock Point came through with a galloping victory in his first test. Picks up 6 pounds today but I can't see that interfering. The mutuel will be mere cigarette money. However, this is too much horse to overlook. St. Nick is a quitter, at best, and threw up the sponge the other day. That race may have been what was needed. I look for a better showing. Jimmy D may surprise.

Fourth Race—Drombo turned in sizzling races at Hialeah and then was given a rest. Gets field to his liking here and will appreciate the 6 furlongs. Vishnu was a keen sprinter down South and will be a factor here. The cheap Axentea should go well.

Fifth race—If I could be assuered that Fabius would draw a good rider, I could go for this one in a great big way. However, despite the signs that point to Sorenson as the jockey, I'm going to give this one a chance. Was miserably ridden last out. War Tide is another one that has been poorly handled. Southard for the rest.

Sixth race—Rock Coventry ran like a horse ready to win a purse here last week. Trials point to the fact that this one is on the up grade. Come On, off Florida form, is dangerous. Fair Crest may develop into the big surprise here. This one packs stretch speed when right. The fast pace today may help.

Seventh race—Chiefs Troubador closed resolutely in a sprint the other day and, from where I sat, appeared to be ready for a good effort at a longer route. As Everfair is none too dependable when odds are short, I'm taking a shot at the top one. Wishing Star for the show.

First Practice Held By Mt. Savage Nine

Mount Savage, Md., April 8 (Spl.).—The Mount Savage baseball team of the Cumberland and Georges Creek League held its first practice session yesterday afternoon. Manager Eddie Stowell directed the drill. Thirty-two tossers have been signed.

Stowell, who succeeds Tom Moran as pilot, states that several promising newcomers are on the roster and that the weak spots in last year's team will be patched up, placing Mount Savage in the thick of the flag race.

Kampfer Gets Build-up Chance

Powerful German Meets Garibaldi Thursday on Auditorium Mat.

HANDSOME HANS KAMPFER, powerful German heavyweight, will return to the Washington Auditorium Thursday night, when Promoter Joe Turner sponsors another of his weekly rassling shows.

He will be tied up with garrulous Gino Garibaldi in a semifinal to the Jim McMillan-Abe Coleman main event.

Recently credited with a great 1¾-hour stand against Jim Browning and upsets of other top-flighters, Kampfer looms as ideal build-up material here.

Wants Bigger Shots.

Though previously featured in time limits locally, Kampfer, in the event he shows impressively against Garibaldi, will earn a main event ranking.

"Hans has asked for bigger shots here," Turner said yesterday, "and I've got to admit his record entitles him to it.

"If Kampfer goes well with Garibaldi, I'll bring him back in a hurry. He's the kind of a fellow I'd like to put on top."

tack, and the champion boxes cooly landing a hard right uppercut flush on the jaw at the bell.

Edison, who has been cranking his clumsy kinetascope continually during the action, is working feverishly to get a new reel installed during the 1-minute rest period.

Round 2. They spar for an opening. Courtney swings a wide right and Corbett dances nimbly inside, only to be met by a hard left to the body. He snaps back with a terrific right uppercut to the jaw, then a barrage of lefts and rights thta drives Courtney to the edge of the 15-foot ring.

Courtney's seconds, John Tracey and Edward Allen, push his bottleholder, Sam Lash, empatiently away and work frantically on their charge's legs for almost the fill minute.

Round 3. Corbett opens like a whirlwind, forcing Courtney to the ropes, where he sways groggily. Scenting the kill, the champion lands a left hook and right counter that drops Courtney. He rises without a count, clinches desparately, and manages to weather the round.

The champion smiles confidently in his corner and most of Edison's assistants have become so engrossed in the battle being waged they have forgotten all about the kinetascope. Only Edison continues to work feverishly with it.

Round 4. Courtney has recuperated remarkably between rounds and he staggers the champion with a hard right behind the ear. Corbett sways dangerously and hinor pandemonium reigns when it looks as though he is to be dethroned—for science. His native boxing skill and speed come automatically to the rescue and he boxes cleverly for the balance of the round to stay out of danger.

Corbett's seconds are exhorting him to box and not try to slug with Courtney. He smiled assurance and nods confidently to a group of Edison's helpers.

Round 5—Corbett is boxing as he has never boxed before, raining blows and dazzling his opponent with phenomenal speed. Just at the bell he doubles Courtney with a terrific body punch that almost breaks him in two.

Now that Gentleman Jim is again in command of the situation, Edison is receiving some help from his assistants, who help him rethread the kinetoscope for the next round.

Round 6—Corbett forces the fighting from the bell, driving Courtney to the ropes time and time again. He floors Courtney with a terrific right. The game challenger rises at the count of five, groggy and out, but impelled to rise by sheer fighting spirit. The champion lands another terrific right on the jaw and Courtney again drops with a sickening thud. He half rises at six, but drops back, flat on his back, to take the full count.

Edison rushes forth to congratulate Corbett, and the champion smiles a gracious acknowledgment to the great inventor. Both have been successful. Corbett has successfully defended his boxing laurels—and Edison has filmed the first fight pictures.

Wash. and Lee Nine Tops in Virginia

V. M. I., V. P. I. Rivals to Meet in This Week's Feature Game.

RICHMOND, Va., April 8 (AP).—King for a week at least, Washington and Lee's Generals, perched atop the huddle in the State baseball race, will look on for a while as other State contenders swing into action.

The Generals got off to a good start in the Old Dominion race, winning from Richmond and William and Mary on successive days. The Indians earned an even break for their week's work by capturing a 6-4 decision from an erratic University of Virginia team that kicked away the ball game.

They were the only games of State championship importance on the week's card but other teams will swing into the Old Dominion title race this week, most of them after successful preliminary tussles with out-of-State nines.

Delaware, Vermont Visit.

Delaware and Vermont, swinging into the Old Dominion for a series of games with Virginia teams, were whipped at almost every turn, although the Green Mountain lads managed to split a double-header with William and Mary.

Virginia Military and V. P. I. will make their Old Dominion debut Wednesday in a renewal of their ancient rivalry in one of the headlining attractions on the week's bills. Another tilt which will carry with it years of rivalry will send William and Mary into battle against the University of Richmond Spiders at Richmond Saturday.

Bridgewater's Eagles, victorious in their last two starts and playing better baseball, will launch their Chesapeake Conference title bid in four games this week. Tomorrow and Tuesday they'll play host to Hampden-Sydney and will entertain the Randolph-Macon nine Friday and Saturday.

3 State Golf Events Go to Virginia Beach

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—Meeting at Lakeside Country Club here, the Virginia State Golf Association decided that all three of the State's championship events will be held at Virgina Beach this year. The association also admitted one new organization, the Norfolk Golf Club, to membership.

Dates for the three tournaments were fixed as follows: Virginia State Women's Amateur Tournament, Cavalier Country Club, Virginia Beach, starting Tuesday, June 26, and finishing the following Saturday; the Virginia State Men's Amateur Tournament, Princess Anne Country Club, Virginia Beach, starting Thursday, June 28 and finishing the following Sunday; Virginia State Open Tournament, Cavalier Country Club, Virginia Beach, September 15 and 16.

Steel Buying Rush Precedes Price Advance

Copper Climbs; Tin Rises to Highest Since '28; Lead Active.

New York, April 8 (AP).—Active contracting for steel for shipment through June 30 was reported in advance of announced price rises ranging from $2 to $8 per ton to become effective next week.

While steel ingot production was said to have slipped off somewhat in some districts, the trade was expecting a rapid pick-up as a result of contracts being placed and increasing orders reaching mills from railroads and automobile manufacturers. Filing of base prices for pig iron representing advances of $1 per ton, effective April 15 and 16 in most districts, was expected to become general.

Copper Advances.

Copper advanced ¼ cent per pound on reports that the copper code was practically completed. Consumer buying interest increased at the basis of 8¼ cents for electrolytic, and while sales were somewhat larger, offerings at that price were restricted, partly owing to views expressed by copper officials of higher levels on the basis of cost of production requirements under the code.

Tin rallied about 1½ cents per pound for the week to highest levels since 1928 in sympathy with strength at London and on unofficial reports of action taken by the international tin committee there concerning authorization to increase tin production by 5 per cent.

The reported increase is said to be less than the recent rate of disappearance, and such increase would go into a "buffer pool" to stabilize prices. Tin-plate mill operations held at around 80 per cent of capacity.

Lead More Active.

Lead smelters experienced a more active demand for metal from most consuming branches, but prices continued unchanged. Some producers were reported reluctant to sell more than daily ore intake at the prevailing price, although demand was said to be on a larger basis.

Zinc became steadier late in the week, with sellers asking advances of 50 cents to $1 per ton above recent levels. Firmness of other metals was said to have attracted a good consumer buying interest for prompt and forward positions at the lower prices which had been available earlier in the week.

Antimony also advanced in sympathy with firmness of Chinese and European markets, with some European buying reported here, but domestic demand restricted at the higher prices.

Couzens Tax Proposal Is Attacking the Federal Financial Problem From Wrong End; What We Need Is Economy, Not Taxes.

By Ralph West Robey.

In spite of the support the Couzens tax proposal has in the Senate it now appears the measure will be killed. The House does not like the suggestion. In this it is right. There are few, if any, greater contributions to the lasting welfare of the country that the Government could make than to balance the budget, but blanket increase in all income taxes by 10 per cent—is not the way to do it. What we need is not more taxes, but more economy. With the present rate of expenditures, even a doubling of every Federal tax on the books would not balance the budget.

In other words the Federal Government has spent in the current fiscal year more than twice as much as it has received in revenue. Total expenditures, through April 4, were $4,968,000,000; total receipts were $2,339,000,000. The deficit, thus, was $2,629,000,000, or $290,000,000 more than twice as large as total receipts. This, it is worth noting too, is in spite of the fact that the public has paid within this time $800,000,000 more in taxes to the Federal Government than in the corresponding period last year.

Until Spending Is Reduced Balancing Budget Is Impossible.

So long as we stay on this kind of a spending spree it is rather fantastic to talk about rasing another $55,000,000, which is the estimated yield of the Couzens proposal, in order to balance the budget. It is something like trying to fill a barrel that has no bottom with water. Until an overhauling of our spending program is made there is little sense in thinking about balancing the budget. With deficits of 3 and 4 million dollars, 50 million one way or the other is quite insignificant.

Of course, what Senator Couzens has in mind is balancing the so-called ordinary budget. It is impossible to believe, however, that the Senator does not know that the division currently being made in the budget is fiction—mere bookkeeping juggling. Theoretically, the difference is between normal, recurring expenditures and unusual, nonrecurring expenditures. Actually, however, this presumed basis for classification has broken down under the political and financial necessity, on the one hand, of having something that can be referred to as a "balanced budget," and on the other hand, of getting the pledged 25 per cent reduction in expenditures.

Even if the theoretical basis for the classification had been adhered to, however, it would make comparatively little difference. The financial position of the Government still would be dependent upon the relatoin of total receipts and total expenditures. Insolvency is not prevented merely because one's capital is dissipated in a spending jag rather than on ordinary living expenses.

Attention Should Be Devoted to Expenditures.

Instead of the Senate fretting about ways to increase taxes, accordingly, it would be far better if it devoted some attention to the way we are spending money. Possibilities of curtailment are almost unlimited. In the first four days of this month the Federal Government made loans and grants to States, municipalities, &c., of $10,500,000, spent $18,700,000 through the CWA; spent $26,000,000 through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration (the overhauled CWA), and spent $2,900,000 on Emergency Conservation work. This makes a total of $58,100,000—an average of $14,500,000 a day. This is at the rate of $5,300,000,000 a year.

All of this was for "relief." Much of it was needed. A large percentage, nevertheless, was needless. It was sheer waste—waste that is justified on the mistaken philosophy that if we just will have the Government spend money everyone will become prosperous. It is high time to put an end to such spending. This does not mean that we should not continue to take care of the unemployed. It means that henceforth we should limit ourselves to keeping them from suffering instead of trying to use money handed over to them as a lever for increasing business activity. If Senator Couzens will accomplish this reform, and others of a comparable nature, he will be performing a far more valuable service than fussing with raising an additional $55,000,000 from the income taxes.

Curb Reveals Mild Rallying During Week

Trading Volume Broadens on Buying; Sales Up to 300,000 Shares.

New York, April 8 (AP).—Mild rallying tendencies prevailed during most of last week's curb trading. Changes, however, were relatively small and late irregularity narrowed gains.

Volume broadened on the buying and transfers, which averaged more than 300,000 for each full session, were substantially increased over the preceding period.

Utilities were slightly erratic in their movements due to uncertainty caused by legislative questions. Oils, specialties and alcohols moved rather evenly and generaly favored the buying side of the market.

Gold mining shares slid off on Thursday after edging higher earlier. Lake Shore reacted 2, but largely recovered on the following day. Aluminum Co. of America stirred up speculative interest with a 5-point climb on Wednesday.

Lerner Stores was a firm feature along with General Tire & Rubber, Schiff Co., Dow Chemical and Natomas Co. In the metal division Hudson Bay Mining and Newmont met good buying.

Gulf Oil was firm at times but other petroleum shares moved narrowly. Hiram Walker, Fisk Rubber, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Swift Internacional displayed mostly fractional improvement. Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric largely recovered from light selling.

Judge Thinks Prisoner Holds All-Time Record

Jamestown, N. Y. (U.P.).—Judge Allan E. Barga believes Carl Young, 51, has set an all-time record for intoxication.

Interested in the man's record, the judge ordered court attendants to look up his history. They found:

1. That Young has been arraigned 78 times on charges of intoxication since 1905.
2. That he has paid $275 in fines.
3. That he has served three years, one month and sixteen days in jail.

Judge Bargar committed Young to Bayville jail when he was unable to pay a $10 fine.

Foreign Students Increase.

Rome (U.P.).—The number of foreign students at Italian universities has been steadily increasing since 1914, according to latest official figures. In 1914 there were 489. This year there are 2,287, of whom 365 are Americans.

Stocks Display Strength in Quiet Trading

Market Pushes to Higher Levels Daily; 50 Issues in New Territory.

New York, April 8.—In its weekly review of business and financial conditions the Wall Street Journal says: Stocks gave an unusual display of strength without furore last week, pushing ahead in a quiet but persistent fashion to successive new highs day by day.

The market was notable also for the breadth of the advance, being led by a wide range of specialties instead of the usual pivotal stocks. Late in the week more than 50 stocks on the big board were in new territory and few of these were the recognized market leaders.

Several developments were responsible for the slow crystallization of bullish sentiment. Aside from the exceptionally favorable reports from various sections of industry, the most important was the growing opposition to the proposed stock exchange control legislation and the pressure for relaxation in the present securities act.

Source of Opposition.

The type of opposition against these measures could not be dismissed as coming directly from Wall street. Business men from all sections of the country lifted their voices in protest. Probably the most impressive testimony against the measure was that presented by Samuel Untermyer, for years an avowed critic of the stock exchange and a pioneer in the move for governmental control.

Mr. Untermyer denounced many features of the bill, particularly the margin provisions. His contribution undoubtedly did more to weaken the defense than any other individual effort.

Advance in Steel.

Advances in steel prices were quick to follow the increase in wages which went into effect April 1, last. As ten days elapse before the higher quotations become effective, the consumers of steel have ample opportunity to place contracts covering their known needs for the coming weeks and months.

One result has been that incoming business to the steel quarters for second quarter delivery has shown quite a spurt, and this is likely to continue at least until the higher prices are ruling. Order books of the steel companies are showing increases, even though operations thus far have not reflected the improved buying.

The rate of activity in the coming weeks will be governed by specifications against contracts. As users of steel are not carrying burdensome stocks, they are likely to start taking deliveries quite early.

The week's range of the Dow-Jones averages follows:

	High.	Low.	Last.	Change.
30 Indust.	$103.95	$101.85	$103.95	+3.64
20 Rails...	49.20	47.92	49.20	+1.89
20 Utilities.	26.23	25.83	26.14	—0.05
40 Bonds..	92.91	92.62	93.91	+1.38

Week ended April 6, 1934.

Bill Perils Aviation Investments, Charge

New York, April 8 (AP).—Investments in aviation companies formerly carrying the mails will be destroyed if the McKellar-Black bill, pending in the Senate, is passed, Ernest R. Breech, president of North American Aviation, Inc., said today.

He made the statement through Capt. Eddie V. Rickenbacker, vice president of the company. North American Aviation, an affiliate of General Motors, controls Eastern Air Transport, Transcontinental and Western Air, and Western Air Express.

World's Finest Book Exhibit Opens Soon

New York, April 8 (AP).—The largest collection of manuscripts in the world and the finest collection of books printed prior to 1500 will go on exhibition here this month.

Both collections, which are in the library of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, are valued at several million dollars. The manuscript collection is twice the size of the next largest group, that in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Thrill of a Grand Coup.

Coup plays, including the grandiloquent sounding Grand Coup, are in their essence simply trump-reducing plays. The player who successfully executes one of these plays, which require delicate treatment in the timing, feels very much like the golfer who makes a hole in one or the fisherman who catches the record fish of the season.

Mr. J. Harlin O'Connell practices law in New York during the day, but many of his evenings he devotes to Bridge, especially enjoying the experts' game at Crockford's. It was there recently that the hand below was dealt, which gave to him, playing with Mrs. Geraldine Furlow, the experience of making his first Grand Coup.

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A Q J ♡ 7 6 ◇ A K Q ♣ A 10 9 4 3
♠ K 7 6 ♡ — ◇ 9 8 3 2 ♣ J 8 7 6 5 2	N W E S	♠ 10 9 5 4 ♡ K 9 5 4 ◇ J 7 6 ♣ K Q
	♠ 8 3 2 ♡ A Q J 10 8 3 2 ◇ 10 5 4 ♣ —

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♡	Pass
3NT	Pass	5♡	Pass
5♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding does not require any particular comment. After North's Jump Response in no-trump to Mr. O'Connell's Simple Takeout, the five-heart bid with the seven-card suit and all the honors except the King is clearly indicated. Obviously North lacks the necessary three Aces and the King of a bid suit to bid five notrump over five hearts and thus unquestionably the correct response to the Slam invitation of five hearts in is six hearts.

The Opening lead was a diamond, which was won in Dummy with the Ace. A heart was played from Dummy and the ten finessed, and when West failed to follow suit, Mr. O'Connell saw the possibility of making his first Grand Coup. The spade finesse was taken and a club was led and trumped. The spade finesse was again taken and another club trumped. Dummy was then reentered with a diamond, and the heart finesse was taken the second time. Another diamond put the Declarer in the Dummy again, and he led the Ace of clubs, upon which East discarded the spade nine and which South ruffed with the eight of hearts. The Dummy was reentered by leading the last spade, and East's heart honor was trapped.

The hand is interesting from another standpoint and that is that should a club be opened the Grand Coup must be played for on the first lead. If, with the club lead, the Ace is played from Dummy and a spade or diamond is discarded from the closed hand, East's heart King can not be captured because of the lack of the necessary number of entries in the Dummy. It will also be noted that unless all the diamonds are played before the third club is led from Dummy, the coup can not be made because that line of play would permit East to dscard a diamond.

A very interesting and well played hand.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

West, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ 10 4 3 ♡ A ◇ A K Q 4 3 ♣ Q J 10 8
♠ — ♡ K Q 10 ◇ J 9 8 ♣ A 7 3	N W E S	♠ — ♡ J 9 8 7 3 ◇ 10 7 6 5 2 ♣ K 5 4
	♠ Q J 8 7 5 2 ♡ 6 5 4 2 ◇ — ♣ 9 6 2

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

German Warrior Heads Chinese Military Staff

Shanghai, April 8 (AP).—Gen. Hans Von Seeckt, German World War hero, arrived today from Germany to become chief military adviser to the Nationalist government.

He came to Chine at the request of Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the government. Von Seeckt replaces Gen. George Wetzell, another German war chief who has advised Chiang Kai-Shek for two years.

Austrians Jail Women In Drive on Socialists

Vienna, April 8 (AP).—The government's new campaign against Socialists was raised to the rooftops in Vienna today when a decree was published outlawing a chimney sweeps' union as a subversive organization.

Police, meanwhile, were arresting housewives. Three women were jailed in upper Austria, including the wife of a warder who helped Socialists and Nazis escape from a jail at Linz.

HEADLINES OF HORROR!

This could happen to YOU!

An automobile accident is a gruesome subject, but why evade the issue? You know that BAD BRAKES cause most accidents, and that, in such cases, loss of life and limb, property damage, civil suit and criminal prosecution are often the result. Why take the chance?

Let's Talk DOLLARS and CENTS

Allow us to examine your car today—there is no charge for this service—and we will tell you the true condition of your brakes. Perhaps they merely need adjusting; but if they are at the danger point, let us make them safe with new high-grade lining. Our PRICES are REASONABLE and we service your brakes thereafter without charge. Consider what that means: As many adjustments as you need during the life of the lining ABSOLUTELY FREE!

DIXIE IS PAYING A VISIT TO THE BOARDING HOUSE OF HER NEW FRIEND FLOSSIE—AND THE TWO GIRLS HAVE GOT TO "CHINNING" ABOUT THE "INMATES" AS FLOSSIE CALLS THEM—
I THINK YOU'RE A LITTLE HARD ON THESE LOVELY WOMEN HERE—IT'S TOO BAD IF THEY HAVE TO FIGHT OVER THESE MEN AN' IF THEY'RE SO JEALOUS OF YOU—BUT YOU CAN'T BLAME 'EM—SOMETIMES GIRLS LIKE US FORGET—WE HAVE IT SO EASY—TH' MEN GO AFTER US—BUT WHEN WOMEN ARE UNATTRACTIVE THEY'VE GOT T' GO AFTER TH' MEN—AN' FIGHT OVER 'EM—
I S'POSE SO—BUT D' YOU THINK IT'S SO DIFFERENT WHEN GIRLS ARE GOOD-LOOKIN'—LIKE US? S'POSE F'RINSTANCE—YOU AN' ME TOOK A SHINE TO TH' SAME FELLOW—?
AW, FLOSSIE—THAT'S SO FAR-FETCHED! THERE ARE SO MANY MEN AROUND—WHY SHOULD WE PICK ON TH' SAME ONE?—AN' WE'RE SUCH DIFFERENT TYPES—HOW COULD TH' SAME MAN CARE IN TH' SAME WAY FOR BOTH OF US?—— —SHUCKS—THAT COULDN'T EVER HAPPEN!
I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT—— AN' IF IT DID HAPPEN, WHY WORRY? WE'D JUST LET NATURE TAKE IT'S COURSE—

Walt Mason, Himself

You Can't Tell.

I know a great attorney, high in the legal game, who's made the long, hard journey to riches and to fame. His fees are most tremendous, and corporations say, "When we have trouble send us that man, and we will pay." His offices are regal, he has a hundred clerks; for anything that's legal he furnishes the works. I knew him when, upgrowing, he went to village school, and made so bad a showing men thought he was a fool. The teacher bet $9, with anger in his eyes, that he, of all the scholars, would win the booby prize. And when he left his studies, to try and earn some kale, his schoolmates and his buddies were sure that he would fail. His prospects were alarming in those dark days of yore; he made a botch of farming, went busted in a store. He fizzled as a plumber and blew up as a clerk, and wasted half a summer attempting blacksmith's work. Around the town he hovered, a failure coarse and raw, and then at last discovered the hokum known as law. It was the graft that suited his talents to a dot; and now the men who hooted and said he should be shot, are full of admiration, they shout and wave their tiles; and in his lofty station he heaves sardonic smiles.
